GERMANS PUSHING FORWARD IN GREATEST BATTLE OF HISTORY

WHITE HOUSE RUSHES U. S. PREPARATION

Nation Faces Tax Boost or Rising Debt in Arms Expansion.

HEMISPHERE TO PROTEST

American Republics Will Send Declaration to Hitler on Invasion.

By LYLE C. WILSON
(UP Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt called two more emergency meetings today to draft big preparedness measures against what the White House described as a four-alarm fire sweeping toward the new world.

White House Secretary Stephen T. Early, who likened the spread of the European war to a conflagration heading this way, said the president would leave it up to congress to decide whether the acceleration of land, air and sea defenses should be financed by new taxes or by raising the statutory debt limit of $45,000,000,000.

Early disclosed that Mr. Roosevelt is conferring first today with leaders of the war and navy departments and later in the day with chairmen of military and naval affairs committees of both houses.

The meetings were scheduled as this government notified the other 20 American republics that it is willing to join in a declaration of protest against Germany's invasion of the lowlands.

The president made it clear, Early said, that congress has but two alternatives in devising means to meet the cost of the new defense outlays which may run $500,000,000 (M) over the $2,000,000,000 (B) defense appropriations which the president already asked.

In the special recommendations for national defense which the president will send congress this week, Early said Mr. Roosevelt probably will say:

"Here is the issue. Let's prevent the fire from reaching our house. How we are going to do it, gentlemen, is up to you."

In preparation for that message, Mr. Roosevelt convened defense conferences virtually without precedent since the World war administration of Woodrow Wilson. The two today are the fifth and sixth in the last 100 hours since Europe's "All-out" war began.

Early emphasized the gravity with which Mr. Roosevelt views the spreading war in Europe.

Out of the unprecedented and urgent conferences Mr. Roosevelt is developing a detailed series of recommendations which will drive defense appropriations this year to a new all-time high in American peacetime history.

This nation's willingness to participate in a new world protest

Nazi Air Fleet of 6,000 Ships Backs Terrific Offensive

Fight Center Along Meuse River; French City of Sedan Falls; Berlin Says Dutch, Belgian Armies Split by Wedge; Brussels in Peril.

(By Associated Press)

The fiercest fighting of the war — fast blazing into the "greatest battle of all time" —raged along the Meuse river between France and Belgium today.

French dispatches said the Germans supported their mechanized land forces with an air armada of between 6,000 and 7,000 planes.

Historic Sedan, 10 miles inside the French frontier, was reported captured.

At least 2,000 tanks already have clashed in combat. The French said German losses in this action were "tremendous." Berlin sources denied it.

Nazis reported 150 enemy planes were destroyed yesterday, raising the total Allied losses to more than 850. The French said more than 400 German planes had been put out of action in the five-day-old conflict.

Heavy fighting started last night and continued today with undiminished fury along the Meuse line. French and Belgian troops fell back on strong defenses in a "strategic withdrawal."

A great battle was reported developing for the possession of Brussels, capital of Belgium.

In Amsterdam, Holland, huge stores of petroleum were set afire today by the Dutch as a defensive measure.

The Dutch high command reported that a German drive at the vital 16-mile dam across the Zuider Zee, which holds back the North sea, had been repulsed.

DNB, the official German news agency, asserted the Belgian and Dutch armies had been separated by a powerful German wedge.

The news agency also declared German troops had thrown back French and Belgian forces at the Gette river, in Belgium, and pursued them toward Louvain.

Amid these rapid-fire developments on the European battlefront, the United States today declared its willingness to join other American republics in a joint protest to Germany against invasion of the little neutral "low countries."

The French conceded the "probable" fall of historic Sedan

AMERICANS ADVISED TO LEAVE ITALY

Hull Admits Warnings Issued In Rome by Ambassador William Phillips.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Secretary of State Hull said today that he understood that Ambassador William Phillips in Rome was advising Americans to leave Italy unless vital interests compel them to stay.

Later, pressed for a more positive statement, state department officials declined to enlarge upon what Hull had said.

The secretary's statement was made at his press conference in answer to questions. He declined to say whether or not the situation in Italy, an ally of Germany, had grown more tense within the last few days.

He first was asked whether Americans had been ordered out of Italy and in reply called attention to the state department's standing instructions to all ambassadors and ministers abroad giving them authority to advise Americans to leave countries which they thought might be drawn into military hostilities. He added that he understood Phillips had been giving attention to this subject.

Pressed further, Hull finally said that it was his impression that the ambassador at present was issuing warnings similar to those given Americans in Rumania and Hungary recently by the American legations there.

These warnings advised the United States citizens to leave unless they had urgent business.

Meanwhile, the impression was growing in diplomatic circles here that Italy might be drawn into the war before the end of this week. Phillips, in recent conversations with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano, has been attempting to persuade Italy to remain at peace.

Meese Named Chairman of War Relief Campaign.

D. O. Meese, Mansfield insurance man, today was named chairman of the local committee working with the American Red Cross to raise a quota of $6,000 for war relief funds.

Paul M. Eliot was named as vice chairman of the drive to assist Meese. A committee of 12 to work with them will be named soon. Not since the war chest of 1917 has America been asked to contribute so large an amount for war relief.

STUDY 'HOT-MIX' FOR W. FOURTH

City Officials, State Highway Engineers Meet Today on New Proposals.

The impasse in the West Fourth street paving project, brought about last week when council refused to approve an appropriation for the city's share of the cost, took on an additional complexity today when a councilman suggested that the city consider resurfacing the street rather than paving it.

City officials, councilmen and state highway officials were to meet at city hall this afternoon to discuss resurfacing, possibly with a hot-mix preparation. The entire project will be considered at that time, Howard Miller, council president, said.

Miller said he had suggested changing the type of the street surface, declaring that the present foundation of the street is in a condition good enough for application of a hot-mix asphalt material.

Mayor William J. Locke and Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton refused to comment on the new turn in the status of the project. Both asserted it was now the council's problem and they were confident that body would work it out satisfactorily.

Murray D. Shaffer, division engineer of the state highway department, who was expected to sit in on the meeting today, informed city officials yesterday that he had hoped to receive bids by May 28, but since city council

11,000 Vote Indicated as County Decides on Primary Races Today

Fair Weather Expected to Reduce Farm Voting; Survey Shows 6,800 to Vote In Mansfield; State Activity Light

About 11,000 voters were expected to go to the polls today in Mansfield and Richland county to nominate Democratic and Republican candidates for 11 county offices and help select district, state and national candidates.

A dull campaign and fair weather in central and southern sections of the state which will tempt farmers to stay at their work were expected to cut heavily into the voting and few observers believed it will equal the 1,600,000 total forecast by the secretary of state.

A survey of the voting in Mansfield conducted at 10:30 a. m. today by The News-Journal indicated that approximately 6,800 ballots will be cast in the city primary and about 4,200 in the county outside Mansfield. Those totals would be light for a presidential primary.

The News-Journal check-up showed today that heaviest early voting was in the Republican Second ward and the Republicans were leading the Democrats by a slight margin in the total vote. The heaviest vote before noon was in Precinct C of the Second ward where 73 voters had cast their ballots.

An Associated Press survey of the state's eight largest cities, representing half of Ohio's population, indicated at noon today that 318,500 Democrats and 304,500 Republicans would vote in the primary. Republicans were expected

Fifty Mansfield retail stores will participate in the annual "Mansfield Days" which will be observed Thursday and Friday. The event will be of special importance to bargain seekers this year because of the retarded normal buying season.

OUTBURST: Italians Burn Flags of France and Britain

(By Associated Press)

ROME—Shouting students burned a British and French flag on a simulated coffin before the British embassy today in a new outburst of anti-Allied demonstrations.

Earlier, they had demonstrated at the French embassy and then marched across town to Porta Pia, the famous gate in Roman wall adjacent to the embassy.

Several thousand students were halted by a barrier of armed troops at the British embassy, as they had been before at the French embassy.

Massing a short distance away, however, they set fire to the "coffin" and threw their clubs on it to make a bonfire.

Before they disbanded, a Fascist official in blackshirt uniform congratulated them on a "magnificent demonstration"; told them their cry was "a war cry."

He declared France and Britain must understand that Italy would never remain a prisoner in the Mediterranean.

Premier Mussolini drove by the bonfire on his way home to lunch and was loudly cheered.

The British consulate took no steps to urge British subjects to leave Italy, but Britons who asked advice were told it might be "wise" to leave.

The British were expected to protest to Italian authorities over the slapping of a Briton identified as Lord Philip Hardwicke, Viscount Royston, at a fashionable night club last night by an Italian distributing anti-British leaflets. The incident was said to have occurred when the earl, a personal friend of Bruno Mussolini, refused to read a leaflet laid on his table by the Italian.

Faces Possible 87-Year Sentence In Cemetery Fraud

CLEVELANDER, NINE OTHERS FOUND GUILTY

Salesmen Charged With Using Mails to Defraud; Fines Can Total $180,000.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO—Christian W. Beck, of Cleveland, promoter of a de luxe cemetery project, today faced a possible sentence of 87 years imprisonment and fines totaling $180,000 on charges of defrauding Middle West investors of $200,000.

Beck, Robert C. Stickney, Boston, and eight salesmen for the cemetery promoter were found guilty of using the mails to defraud. A federal court jury which had heard testimony for three weeks returned the finding last night after 10 hours' deliberation.

The government charges that lots in the Crown Hill cemetery at Twinsburg, O., were sold through Stickney's first Commonwealth Trustees, incorporated, as investments with promises of large and quick profits. Prosecution witnesses testified that none of the lots were resold.

Among those found guilty were Harry N. Freeman, New York; William Woodring, Barney Wolstein and Mort Greenbaum, Cleveland; Harold Ross, Detroit; Harry Golby, Toledo, O.; Jack Harris, Chicago, and Michael Gordon, Akron, O.

The salesmen were found guilty on various counts including conspiracy to use the mails to defraud. Beck and Stickney were found guilty on all 18 counts in the indictment.

Judge John P. Barnes set May 20 for new trial arguments.

DEATH COMES TO 'RED EMMA'

Famous Anarchist, Deported From U. S. in 1919, Dies In Canada.

(By International News Service)

TORONTO — Emma Goldman, the famous "Red Emma" who was internationally known as an anarchist, died early today in her home here of the effects of a stroke suffered last February. She was 70.

"Red Emma" and her comrade, Alexander Berkman, the man who attempted to assassinate Henry Clay Frick, were deported from the United States in December, 1919, after serving short prison terms for attempting to obstruct the war draft. Both soon became disillusioned with their native Russia which they had hoped to find the land of their ideals. They were forced to flee Russia in 1921.

They wandered about the continent for several years, Berkman finally committing suicide on Miss Goldman's birthday, June 27, 1936, at Nice, France. Miss Goldman was readmitted to the United States in 1934 from Canada for a short lecture tour during which she was forbidden to engage in political activity.

The America against which she had once urged anarchistic violence was to her then the only remaining nation of hope in the world, she told her audiences.

Miss Goldman, as a young Jewess in Russia, was driven early to anarchism out of hatred for the czar under whom her co-religionists were persecuted and later by labor conditions she found in this country.

She migrated to the United States at the age of 17 with a sister and settled in Rochester, N. Y. A tyrannical father, an early unhappy marriage and her revulsion over the execution of several anarchists in Chicago in 1887 drove her to find inspiration in the teachings of Johann Most, an early American anarchist.

Students Elect Mare But Coed Will be May Queen

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— A Belgian mare named Jean Scott, with a taffy-colored mane and tail, received the most votes today in the balloting for Ohio State university's May Queen.

But Miss Virginia Julian of Columbus was declared the May Queen. The voting for the mare was just a prank of the agricultural students and the votes were "written in."

The idea was similar to that in 1926, when Maudine Ormsby, a Holstein cow, was crowned May Queen.

Sixteen Ohio state co-eds were selected today for membership in Chimes, junior women's honorary society. They were chosen for personality, leadership in campus activities and scholarship. Miss Rosalie Thompson of Dayton was one of those selected

Up and Down THE STREET

The recently covered water mains on West Fourth street claimed their first victim last evening during the heavy rain, when an automobile, in which a group of young girls were riding, became stuck at the intersection of West Fourth and North Mulberry streets. Rear wheels of the car sunk into the mud up to the axle. Six men, seeing the predicament the girls were in, lifted the car out of the ditch, and put several lanterns around the hole.

There is talk of the war everywhere, but it is in "concentrated form" at McVey Post, American Legion. Whenever men congregate there, you can bet they are talking of the present war and the old war. For the first time in many years they are beginning to talk about the tragic side of their war experiences; to compare the old and the new methods. One of the most interested of the groups there is, Mrs. Floyd Buzzard, French war bride of 22 years ago whose brother and three brothers-in-law are in the French army fighting. She has had no word of them in recent weeks.

It was a case of threatening the lives of five young robins or leaving them to grow to maturity, and the robins won. Left there, the tent pole would be useless, so Estes put up another pole.

Sheriff E. P. Long was "quick on the draw" this morning when he saw a chance to pull a practical joke on City Detective Lee Remy. At the county jail, Remy innocently picked up a folder containing explosive matches and began examining them. The sheriff saw his chance and offered Remy a cigaret. The trick worked, and when the match exploded in Remy's face, he looked non-plussed for a moment and then commented good-naturedly, "I fell for that one, hook, line and sinker, didn't I?"

Jury Saves Youth From Chair in Murder Verdict.

LANCASTER — (INS) — Accompanying their verdict with a mercy recommendation, a three-judge court today found William S. Hart, 18, Middletown, guilty of first degree murder in the slaying a year ago of Alex Stromstead.

Stromstead was a tailor at the Boys Industrial school and was beaten to death during an escape attempt. The court's mercy recommendation saved Hart from the electric chair and made a life sentence mandatory.

Robert E. Lee, 17, Norwood, Mass., another B. I. S. inmate indicted jointly with Hart, will go on trial before a jury on May 23. The state will charge that it was Lee who rained blows on the tailor's head, causing death. Hart was accused of handing Lee the murder weapon.

DUTCH SET UP GOVERNMENT IN LONDON; REFUGEES ARRIVING

(By International News Service)

LONDON — With Queen Wilhelmina and other members of the Dutch Royal family safe in London, the Netherlands government moved quickly today to establish its seat in the British capital as warfare spread over Holland.

Premier Dirk Jan De Geer and all other members of the Dutch government not already in London arrived at the British capital late this morning.

Immediately after their arrival the Dutch legation announced:

"We hope with the help of the Allies to be able to continue the fight, and that is absolutely our intention."

The legation also asserted that Dutch forces captured a German general in whose possession was found a list of prominent Dutch persons "who are destined for immediate shooting."

Early this morning a trainload of refugees arrived from Holland, many of them women and children who crossed the North sea aboard freighters, sleeping on straw in the holds.

All were exhausted. Babies slept in blankets and older children were nearly unconscious from fatague. The refugees were conveyed to buses which took them to their destinations. Most of the refugees had abandoned all their possessions in Holland.

The Dutch legation issued a statement reiterating that the queen and members of the Dutch cabinet came to England "much against their will" and only when it was found that the government could not be directed properly from The Hague.

The statement added that Prince Bernhard, husband of Crown Princess Juliana, is determined to return and join the fight against the invaders. Bernhard and Juliana arrived with their two children yesterday.

According to the legation statement, "fifth columnists" and German parachute troops still form the greatest problem facing Holland. Even soldiers at the front, the legation said, do not know whether the next man is a friend or foe.

Mayor William J. Locke and county commissioners were asked by WPA officials to issue proclamations officially declaring "open house week" and urging Mansfielders to visit projects.

Seven projects, employing about 125 persons, were listed for public inspection. They were the housekeeping aid, adult education, roof drainage, sewing, historical records, school lunch, and recreation projects.

WAR GAMES AT CLIMAX IN BIG TEST MANEUVER

400 Tanks Go Into Action as Army Tries Out Second Phase for Observers.

(By International News Service)

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, CAMP BEAUREGARD, La. —The "zero hour" came at dawn today for 70,000 regular troops of the Third army, squaring off for combat in the second phase of the army's giant war maneuvers—biggest in United States peace time history.

Problems confronting the opposing red and blue armies were couched in heavy army phraseology, but in the terms of the layman this second phase of the maneuvers ultimately will result in the most spectacular mimic warfare of tanks ever staged in this country.

In all, more than 400 "mechanized monsters" will be placed in action as the blue army, under command of Major General Walter Short, comes into realistic, if simulated, warfare against the red army of Major General Walter Krueger.

The scenario of war, as devised by the army high command, was this:

"A hostile force (red army) estimated to be a corps strong in cavalry and mechanized troops, had crossed the Sabine river and seized bridge heads.

"The blue force, which has concentrated in the camp Beauregard area, shows evidence of moving west."

This meant that the two forces —40,000 blues and 30,000 reds— ultimately would fight it out for positions as the bigwigs of the U. S. army stood by and watched.

No formal purpose was ascribed to this second phase. Nevertheless, Lieut. Gen. Stanley Ford, commander of the Second army with headquarters at Chicago, said: "If we have any deficiencies in the army, we would like to find them out."

General Ford is covering the maneuvers as an observer, and the lessons he learns will be applied when the Second army holds its maneuvers in Wisconsin this August.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Excerpts From Miss Midnight's Diary—

Any week which features a Billy Rose opening, the reappearance of the tomfooling Hartmans, a Jules Glaenzer soiree for Noel Coward and the Lawrence Olivier-Vivien Leigh bout with Shakespeare (Shakespeare lost in the eleventh) is not a week to be sniffed at, and so far as I know, nobody sniffed. Especially since it also featured the neatest trick of the year, performed by the Algonquin Supper club, which held a gala closing and a gala reopening on the same night, a thing which I believe never has happened before, even in this unpredictable area.

* * *

A Billy Rose holiday is as flexible as a Roosevelt Thanksgiving. In his last Diamond Horseshoe show he gave the customers New Year's Eve twice nightly, at dinner and supper, and in the new and current offering he winds up the divertissement with the Fourth of July. Among those who held their ears at the fireworks on opening night were the Jimmy Walkers, the Jack Bennys, Jimmy Dorsey, the Bert Lytells and Jack Haley, who turned up, unhappily, without Sharkey, the scintillating seal.

Do not be fooled by the fact that the show is built around such veterans as Gilda Gray, Eddie Leonard, Blanche Ring and Pat Rooney into thinking it has anything to do with pompadorus and bustles.

Right in the middle of one of the other acts, Dorothy "Butch" Bigbee, formerly one of the slightly-dressed showgirls, does what the boys in my vicinity were calling the best strip tease act since Gypsy Rose Lee retired from the Minsky circuit.

* * *

He dashed into the Kit Kat wearing it Sunday night, sat down for a few minutes with two friends, then dashed out again. Monday night he reappeared on schedule, inquired if Tommy Shevlin was in, learned he was not, left, and a little while later returned again.

"Frank," said Gus, the Kit Kat's manager, "if it'll help, I'll put in a revolving door for you."

* * *

I dropped in at le Ruban Bleu Tuesday night to hear Paula Laurence a dark, birdlike girl with a mannequin's figure and somewhat the look of a character on an Egyptian frieze, sing "I Make Love In My Own Peculiar Way." This odd homicidal ditty has an illusion to "ladies in retirement," and the gentleman who giggled at the line with special relish was Reginald Denham, co-author of the mystery thriller of the same name.

With Mr. Denham was Mary Orr, the young actress, and I might add that they are becoming a standard item. Also draped around the room were Vincent Bendix, Dana Suessee, and Norman Bel Geddes.

* * *

This, friends, was the night on which the Algonquin Supper club simultaneously closed and opened, with dancing in the lobby and all kinds of celebrities wafting through the doorway to say goodbye and hello. Helen Hayes and Jo Nathan (Miss Heyes looking demure in a black dinner dress with white lace at the yoke) were joined by Miss Hayes' husband, Charlie MacArthur, and Norma Shearer. Miss Shearer was attired in a black dinner dress and bright green coat, and her hair, which used be dark brown, is now a becoming reddish blonde.

Romeo Olivier and Juliet Leigh came in very late and sat gazing into each others' orbs, which is I suppose very high class gazing and something the public has to pay $3.30 to view.

Lenore Ulric looked exotic at a front table. Mr. Houston sang for the guests, and very successfully. After several encores by enthusiastic demands he remarked that if Frank Case would consider him to succeed Greta Keller, he'd be more than pleased to oblige.

All kidding aside, what really happened was that the club, which was to have closed, got so many protests from the regular patrons that Mr. Case decided it just wasn't fair to the public, so he printed "extras" announcing that the club wasn't closing, it was opening, and the people stayed until 6 a. m.

Also on that evening the town was enlivened by the premieres of the swingy Red Nichols at the Famous Door—hot dig-dig-dig!—and the zingy Grace and Paul Hartman at Fete's Monte Carlo. Both very goody.

* * *

Wednesday night Jules Glaenzer gave a party, and those who attended, included Norma Shearer, the Howard Dietzes, Conde Nast, Doris Dudley, Moss Hart, Dorothy and Dick Rodgers and Gertrude Lawrence, who can never say, with Cole Porter's ditty, that they "were never at a party where they honored Noel Cow-ard."

Noel was the guest du soir, and he lounged elegantly on the large sofa quite near one of the pianos, smoking cigarets in a long holder, making genial little quips, and behaving very charmingly for what I like to consider a formidable member of the British Intelligence.

There is just one thing I would like to know. I noticed that when a pianist struck up "Tea For Two," Mr. Coward searched the room with a quick glance until he found Gertrude Lawrence, who was sitting on the stairs. He caught her eye, smiled, and blew a kiss. I would like to know just what significance "Tea For Two" has for them. I would like to know where they had that tea, and when.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—John Ford has launched another of his polite little drawing room drammys.

The launching was successful. Within the first three days the director had filmed three roaring fist fights on the deck of the British tramp steamer S. S. Glencairn. His captain (Wilfrid Lawson) was having a mite of trouble with the boys, a bunch of exquisites whom you will recognize as Thomas Mitchell, Ward Bond, John Wayne, Barry Fitzgerald, Joe Sawyer and others of their hulking type. The lads were weary of the sea, and surly, and in this Caribbean port the cap'n, hungry for a cargo, had not seen fit to grant shore leave. So the bumboat women, loaded with baskets of fruit including spirituous fruit of the vine, had come aboard to supply liquid consolation, and the party had ended in a brawl. Very polite, y'know.

It was a typical beginning to a typically Fordian drama — burly, hairy-chested four-fisted.

* * *

The picture is "The Long Voyage Home," first offering of Ford's Argosy production unit. Dudley Nichols, co-worker with Ford on "The Informer" and "Stagecoach," whipped up the script from four of Eugene O'Neill's one-act plays, "The Moon of the Caribees," "In the Zone," "Bound East for Cardiff" and that whose title is the film's.

Like "Stagecoach," the new effort is a story of characters revealed in peril. O'Neill's people and his ship face up-to-date dangers, for the S. S. Glencairn's cargo, ultimately, is ammunition for the current war zone.

The cast of any Ford picture is likely to bring together a "Ford stock company," people who play in every film of his in which he can spot them. Wayne and Bond (who has his best role yet) are the director's closest actor friends. John Qualen was a natural addition after "The Grapes of Wrath." Joe Sawyer's first for Ford was "The Informer." Barry Fitzgerald's was "The Plough and the Stars." Jack Pennick, here playing a big slow-witted Dutchman, is a Ford trademark. Francis Ford, John's brother, is among the missing, but there are several roles to be filled. Thomas Mitchell, of course, was an Oscar-winner because of "Stagecoach," and J. M. Kerrigan is an "Informer" veteran. Missing are those other Ford favorites, Donald Meek and John Carradine, but this is surely an oversight on Eugene O'Neill's part, not on Jack Ford's.

* * *

That actors such as these seem to gravitate naturally to Ford productions (and vice versa) is a curious fact. Curious, that is, unless you've followed the Ford career and realize that his best works—"The Informer," "Stagecoach," "Lost Patrol," and most notably "The Grapes of Wrath"—have been peopled by rugged he-men, by earthy, whiskery luggs, by "characters" with interesting quirks of one sort or another. His best heroines (he has none here and frequently dispenses with them altogether) are compounded from the soil.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION++

CHAPTER IX.

Brooke had gotten three letters from Grace, newsy and jolly. Since her house was filled and her cook overburdened, there was no possibility of her coming to New York soon. There were brief notes from Helen, her stepmother, (her father had not written a letter in years) of family news and and the certainty that she was happy near Rod.

Not forgotten as the days passed was the afternoon at Barney Glass's. Nor were the three people she had met there—the vivacious Irene, the tall, sunburned Julian, the rotund Barney. Rod had not proposed taking her there again and she preferred to think that Jim had been an alarmist: that her love for Rod had made her small and suspicious

After Rod's first call, Mrs. Kingsbury had admitted, "He's a fine looking young man." Brooks had had one evening with Jim, telling Mrs. Kingsbury before he came that he was Rod's oldest friend. It was an evening simlar to that first evening with him except that he had merely inquired about Rod but had not discussed him.

* * *

And so one day had slid evenly into the next. Surprising how short the days were, how filled, punctuated importantly, by evenings with Rod. In the morning, after seeing him ,she could not remember what they had said to each other, but she recalled vividly his smile, the darkness of his eyes and the contact of their lips before he left her. Not quick to laughter, her heart jumped when he laughed. But there was no one to whom to talk! And often, after an evening with Rod(she longed to say to the old woman enthroned in her bed, "I was so happy last night," and pour forth thoughts and feelings. Ellen was sweet but Brooke dared not risk a confidential chat with her lest Mrs. Kingsbury as was her habit, suddenly appear noiselessly out of nowhere.

It was Saturday evening and past eight o'clock and Mrs. Kingsbury, Brooke hoped, had been lulled to sleep by the latest and goriest mystery story. Often, she suspected with amusement, that Mrs. Kingsbury's curiosity got the better of her and that after Brooke left her, she read on with the aid of her magnifying glass.

It had been Thursday, she thought, since Rod last called. Pulling over her head a slim black wool frock bought with Mrs. Kingsbury's first check. She was thinking of the difference in quality in Chatham-purchased frocks and New York purchased frocks when the phone beside her bed rang. Was Rod delayed?

"Hello, Brooke?"

"Yes, Jim. How are you?" He did not know that the sudden gayety in her voice was actually relief that it was not Rod who had been delayed or, worse, telling her he couldn't come.

There was a pause. Then Jim said slowly, "I'm fine. But—but how are you?"

Stupid . . . "I'm fine, too."

He seemed to gulp. "Well, I—I was just wondering how you were, and the job, and . . ."

"Everything is going along beautifully." This was so pointless ... "Subways don't frighten me any more and I haven't been lost for two weeks. And if you're interested in murder stories, I can give you a long list of titles."

He hesitated again. "Well, I'm not particularly interested. We'll—we'll have to get together soon. I've a new symphony that took almost half of my last pay. If you need me ..."

"Thank you, Jim." He was acting in a very strange way. "When I want music and spaghetti and wine, I'll call you."

"Okay. Good-bye."

In a dull voice that sounded very far away he said, "Good-bye."

The delay necessitated hurry since she liked to be ready to leave as soon as Rod came. Voices that might be loud and the certainty of Mrs. Kingsbury's antipathy for men made it unwise for them to linger. With great care she placed a black hat, which bore close resemblance to an Egyptian fez, over her dark hair. She told herself that she was happy, that she was glad she had come to New York and that her life could not be more satisfactory. Quite soon now the bell would ring and she would open the door, seeing Rod's smile respond to hers. What lovely thoughts were never expressed! And while she knew that hers would be lovely when she saw him, all her reaching out to him, yet she would say a conventional "Hello, Rod."

When she had gathered her coat and bag and gloves, she put up the shades, seeing that over the city fell the cold bright radiance of a full moon. "We'll walk back tonight," she thought, "if it isn't too late." Where he would take her mattered little. A week ago he had said, "There's a place I'd like to take you directly after payday." Thinking that the place must be expensive, she had shopped the next afternoon.

Ellen, a newspaper in her arm, passed her in the narrow, slim hall.

"My you look nice," Ellen whispered, her broad, kind face wrinkling as she smiled. "After I've read the paper. I'll put it on our table when I go in to turn down your bed." She shook her head. "Isn't the war terrible!" Smiling again, she said, "Good night. Have a nice time."

Only one amber light on the table beside the divan burned in the little-used living-room. Brooke sat down and had waited tensely only a few moments when the bell rang twice.

* * *

Disappointment that it was not Rod who stood outside but a red-haired messenger boy drained all color from her face.

"Miss Brooke Carter?"

For her? Her father . . . Grace . . . "Yes."

Signing with trembling fingers, she took the telegram, closed the door and went into the living-room again, tearing open the envelope as she stood beside the lamp. She read:

MRS. DAVIES AND I MARRIED TODAY. SAIL FOR HAWAII TONIGHT. LETTER FOLLOWS. FORGIVE ME.

ROD.

Three times she read it, then just stood there with the thing in her hand. She was still standing, dazed, when the phone rang. Like one either blind or drunk, she staggered to it and picked it up.

"Brooke? This is Jim. Don't you know yet?"

"Yes. I know." Her voice was lifeless.

"It's in the paper, their pictures. I thought you knew when I called a while ago! I'm coming for you. Be there in a couple of minutes. . . ."

* * *

Still standing beside the telephone, she realized that the only light in the room into which she had staggered came from the moon. Rod—married! Married! The words were like the deafening beat of drums in her mind in which one swordlike thought tumbled over the other, all parting finally for the mental picture of a ship going out to sea and Rod standing beside Irene Davies.... She looked about helplessly, her eyes stunned, tears stringing them. She felt as if her heart had burst and that she could not bear its pain. Wanting to scream, she merely whimpered and clenced her hands tightly. This was like brushing death.

But the ringing of the doorbell shocked her into reality; Jim was coming. When she opened the door and saw him, his thin face troubled and compassionate, she sobbed. He drew her into the hall and said, "I'll get your coat." An instant later he was helping her into it and leading her out of the building.

The taxi was waiting. Jim slid in beside her and said tensely, "What a rotten thing to do!"

The fullness of her throat wouldn't let her speak. "I can't go on like this," she thought. "I can't bear it." Her handkerchief was wet. And always when she cried, even a little, her head ached horribly. She felt now as she had felt many times as a child when she had a fever; everything was distorted, consciousness came and went, and later insignificant things were vividly remembered. cold moonlight as they rode Later she remembered the hard through the dark street and of thinking, "I'll never see him again," remembering him, she knew not why, not as he had been the last time they were together but as he had been many nights ago when they paused to look in a shop window—the flash of his perfect teeth when he laughed over trivial gadget. Of all memories to recall—that one . . .

Anger came as a defense. "I hate him! I hate him!" But anger was quickly defeated. She didn't hate him. She loved him and wanted him, and this was killing her slowly. And this was a crazy nightmare to be sitting beside a grim-looking Jim riding she knew not and cared not where... It was insane and unbelievable, and this wasn't she. Rod was everywhere looking at her with familiar expressions—smiling, sober, ardent.

* * *

By the time the taxi reached Jim's apartment, the inner storm had raged and abated, leaving her weak and almost senseless.

In the gloomy cluttered room he helped her out of her coat and when she sat on the divan he brought her brandy and stood over her while she drank.

"You're very kind, Jim," she said, her voice breaking, hating it for its breaking as she had always hated it even as a child when she was hurt or punished. She must stop crying and yet she felt that she could have dissolved in her tears willingly.

He smiled understandingly, took the glass from her. "I went through something like this myself once." Then, "There's not much any one can do except to be kind. Go on and cry. Say anything. It will make you feel better. I saw it in the evening paper and I—I couldn't be the one to tell you. It's the damnedest . . ."

"He was seeing her all the time he was seeing me. I saw that afternoon at Barney Glass's that what you said was true." Her voice was jerky, tearful, hoarse.

"Everything you said was true. She wanted him. . . ."

"She got him . . . and he got her money."

"I feel so—so futile." It was a new and terrifying sensation—futility, emptiness . . .

"No goal," Jim said tersely. Then, "You've got to pull yourself out of it, Brooke. It's going to be tough. I can say a lot, I can be nice and I can give rubber-stamp advice, but you've got to go through it yourself. I'm not thinking about him. I don't give a damn about him. I'm thinking about you and where you're going from here. You've lived for him but he's—he's out of the picture and you've got to start living for something else—for yourself. But you're thinking of him now. That's the trouble. You will for a long time."

Why I Sell GAS REFRIGERATORS

By Your GAS COMPANY SALESMAN

PERHAPS it is because I'm so completely sold on gas refrigeration myself that I have been successful in selling it to others. Gas refrigeration, in my opinion, is one of the greatest developments in the modern home appliance field. The gas refrigerator, as it is made today, has all the advantages of modern automatic refrigeration plus an operating principle which is entirely different. This difference is what places the gas refrigerator ahead of all others.

There are no moving parts in the freezing system of a gas refrigerator. Instead, the refrigerant is circulated by a tiny gas flame. You don't have to be an engineer to understand the big advantage of such a principle. Since there is nothing to wear out, lasting efficiency is assured. This means low upkeep and continued low operating cost — to say nothing of permanent silence. To top this off, The Gas Company now is backing the 1940 Servel Electrolux gas refrigerator with a ten-year unconditional guarantee on the complete refrigerating system — full assurance to the customer of no expense on any part of the freezing unit for at least 10 years.

Who Is He?

What kind of a fellow is the average Gas Company salesman? Our records show that he is 37 years of age and that he has been with the company about 3 years. These records further reveal that over 86% of all Gas Company salesmen are married, that a great many of them own their homes. Gas Company salesmen are substantial citizens of their communities. Get acquainted with the Gas Company salesman in your locality. You'll find him a person worth knowing.

In addition to it being the best buy on the market today, there is still another reason why I sell the gas refrigerator. Like everybody else, I'm interested in making the best living I can. The ever increasing public acceptance of the gas refrigerator has added to the possibilities of my earnings from its sale. And believe me, the customer is getting greater value for his money today than ever before, because prices this year are lowest in Servel history.

Now that I've told you why I sell gas refrigerators, I'd like to have the opportunity of showing you why you should buy one.

JOE SAUER, whose brother Al is one of Mansfield's outstanding lightheavyweight fighters, will be seeking his third ring victory when he meets Jack King, Columbus welterweight, in one of the three-round settos on the Friendly House amateur boxing card at the Armory Thursday night.

Joe, who made his ring debut in the Junior Association of Commerce tournament this spring, has been advancing by leaps and bounds. He lost out in the final of that tourney, but came back later to hand the champion a beating.

King is rated as one of the leading Columbus 147-pounders and is a willing mixer.

The show, which is being staged to raise money for the settlement boxers' medical fund, will be headlined by five-round matches between Jake Zacharias, 160, Friendly House, and Joe Maxin, of Cleveland, national amateur champion, and Beauford Glover, 135, Friendly House, and Frank Franklin, Columbus city champion.

A semi-final five-rounder pits Paul Carbetta, 115, Mansfield, against Ernie Mossman, 116, of Cleveland.

Three other three-round bouts are on the program, and two preliminary affairs between youngsters in the Friendly House boxing classes will open the show at 8:15.

Beeber is not satisfied with the performance of the club in workouts this spring, and will return to the practice field at Liberty park at 5:30 p. m. Wednesday. The club may play host to an out-of-town team Sunday, Villella stated.

Dean of Tribe Pitching Staff Goes Job-Hunting as Vitt Slashes Squad.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—Willis Hudlin, one of the oldest American league players in point of service, went job-hunting today.

The dean of the Cleveland pitching staff was given his unconditional release yesterday as Manager Oscar Vitt slashed his squad within one of the 25-player limit which becomes effective tomorrow.

* * *

Today's game with Philadelphia marked the first time in more than 13 years a Cleveland team has taken the field without "Hud" on the mound or in the dugout. Bob Feller was due to hurl with Nelson Potter on the hill for the Athletics.

* * *

Hudlin was purchased from Waco of the Texas league a year after his graduation from high school. He will be 34 years old on May 23.

Hudlin won two and lost one this season, being batted out by the Browns Sunday in his last appearance. His lifetime record here is 157 victories and 151 defeats. His best season was in 1927 when he won 18 and lost 12. He won 10 games or more for 10 seasons.

"It certainly was a surprise to me," Hudlin commented, "but it's all part of the game."

* * *

He said he was confident he would land a job with another American league team. The Boston Red Sox and Chicago White Sox were reported interested in signing the right-hander.

* * *

Catcher Hank Helf or one of the relief pitchers is expected to be the other Indian to go.

Cincy Battles Dodgers Today

Leadership of National Loop Depends on Outcome.

BROOKLYN—(AP)—Still in first place but a bit dizzy over a 14-inning merry-go-round with the Cards which ended with the score tied, 8 to 8, the Reds faced the Dodgers today.

* * *

Leadership of the National league hinged on outcome of the encounter as Brooklyn ended a successful campaign against the Phils only a half game behind the Cincinnati club.

* * *

Both teams put forth the best they had for the decisive battle. Bucky Walters, ace hurler for the Reds, went on the mound against Tex Carleton, who rode to fame a few weeks ago by pitching a no-hit, no-run game in Cincinnati.

The derby with the Cards started off with no umpires on hand. Ford Frick, National league president, said in New York that the Reds management had failed to notify him of the game, postponed from April 23.

Umpire Larry Goetz, who had stopped in Cincinnati, saved them there. But from that point the game was a 27-hit marathon which lasted three hours and 35 minutes.

* * *

About the only bright spots in the game were Johnny Mize's three home runs and one round tripper clouted by Joe Orengo for the Cards.

* * *

Mize got a circuit clout in the second off Johnny Vander Meer, on the mound briefly for the first time this year. His third homer came in the thirteenth to give the Cards a lead but the Reds returned with a double and a single to tie the score in its final knot.

Four Cardinal hurlers and five Cincinnati pitchers took part.

Stage Phantom Ball Game as Teams Deadlock

Reds, Cardinals Battle 14 Innings; Darkness Halts Contest at 8-8 Tie.

(By Associated Press)

THE LITTLE GAME that wasn't there, a phantom baseball battle as far as the National league was concerned, was probably the lustiest 14-inning interlude that ever ended exactly where it started.

It was an 8-8 tie between the league-leading Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals with darkness finally halting the show. It also was one of three games played in the majors yesterday, the others likewise being in the National league with the New York Giants beating Boston 11-5 and Brooklyn downing the Phillies 6-3.

It's a story begun on an historic occasion. A flood April 23 washed out a contest the Cards had scheduled at Cincinnati. It was the first time a flood ever had caused postponement of a major league game.

Later someone thought of using the open date both teams had on Monday, May 13, when they would be heading east together after playing a series in St. Louis. The newspapers were notified. Fans were told. It was a special ladies' day and 9370 women thronged Crosley Field. But the National league office in New York didn't know anything about it.

President Ford Frick didn't assign any umpires.

* * *

Larry Goetz, one of the National league's regular staff of arbiters, was located enjoying a day off at his home in Cincinnati and summoned to duty. Coach Jim Wilson of the Reds and Pitcher Lon Warneke of the Cards were pressed into service and the game got started half an hour late.

The tie kept the Reds half a game in front of the second-place Dodgers, who put down the Phils with a minimum of effort. All the Philadelphia runs were scored in the fifth, Hugh Casey holding the visitors scoreless before and Vito Tamulis shutting them out after. Manager Leo Durocher made four hits to lead the assault on Ike Pearson.

The third-place Giants snatched their sixth straight victory with an economical 10-hit attack on six Boston pitchers. Frank Demaree homered with two on in the first, Bill Jurges tripled with two on in the third and Babe Young doubled two runners across in the fourth. Five consecutive walks by Joe Callahan gave them two of their other tallies.

STAGE PRACTICE GAME

Manager Hedges' Tinkey Lumber softball team will tee off in a practice game at 6 p. m. today at Maple Lake Park. Manager Hedges requests that his team members be present for the game.

SPORTS GOSSIP

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK—(AP)—Trotters and pacers are all set to go under the lights at Mineola, L. I., soon now that the governor has appointed a commission. . . . If George Preston Marshall was a baseball instead of a football baron, he'd go a long way to get Zeke Bonura and Buck Newsom. Estimates each is worth 75,000 paid admissions.

AND SO IT GOES.

Here's Shirley Temple retiring at 11 with three million potatoes and Comrade Whitney Martin quipping, "I reckon I'll be able to retire at three million with 11 bucks."

* * *

Rue de Sockeruè: Jenkins vs. Armstrong has struck a snag.

Jenkins won't sign at over 138 and Armstrong insists on 140. They'll probably compromise on 139. . . . Mike Jacobs, who let an option on the Boston Garden go by the boards, has been getting balder and balder ever since Armstrong and Paul Junior netted $32,000 up there. . . . Johnny Paychek is anxious to prove he isn't as bad as all that and wants to fight Red Burman free gratis on the Louis-Godoy card. . . . Lou Ambers will take his first match as a welterweight soon after the stork visits his home in June.

James S. Kearns, Chicago Daily News: "One line forecast: The U. of Chicago case will scarcely be mentioned at the Big Ten meeting, May 24-25."

Blues Stay on Top of League

Increase Lead to Full Game As They Defeat Colonels.

There seems to be little hope of dislodging the Kansas City Blues from the crest of the American association at least as long as they are playing at home.

* * *

The Blues, shooting for their second straight pennant, have won 10 of 12 games before the home spectators. They increased their first place lead to a full game yesterday with an 8 to 2 victory over Louisville while the second-place Minneapolis Millers were idle.

* * *

Milwaukee advanced into a third place tie with Indianapolis by trimming the Indians, 7 to 4. Ben Zentara, Indianapolis second baseman, ran his string of errorless games to 22, having handled 136 chances flawlessly since the season opened.

REDS SEND TWO ROOKIES TO MINOR LEAGUE CLUBS

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Rookie Infielders Damon Phillips and Don Lang of the Cincinnati Reds have been sent to minor league clubs for further seasoning, subject to recall on 24-hour notice. Phillips was sent to Syracuse of the International league and Lang to Indianapolis of the American association.

Favor Carlson To Win Crown

Intercollegiate Golf Champ Tops Conference List.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Toledo University's Marshall Carlson, with the Ohio intercollegiate golf crown on his head, today became an outstanding favorite to win the Ohio conference links title.

* * *

If he can cop the second championship at Toledo Heather Downs—his home course, incidentally—on May 24-25, the "Rocket" golf and basketball captain will become the first person ever to hold the two titles at one time.

* * *

Apparently unharmed by a week's layoff, Carlson shot a four-over-par 148 yesterday over the wind-swept 36-hole course at Ohio State University to win the intercollegiate championship.

* * *

After matching par for the first 27 holes, he ended up with a six-stroke lead over Chick Evans of Urbana, Ohio State star who placed second with 154. The defending champion, Jack Wood of Cincinnati, tied for fifth with 157.

* * *

The four-man team championship was won by Ohio State's "A" squad with 624, or 13 strokes ahead of the runner-up Toledo squad. The other teams finished in this order: Ohio State "B" 642; Wooster 672; Kenyou 673; Denison 677; Cincinnati (defending champion) and Miami 688, and Ohio Wesleyan 717.

Awards Prizes For Oddities

Magazine Gives Top Prize To New York Coach.

KANSAS CITY — (AP) — Sports oddities that won prizes in a nationwide contest sponsored by a magazine devoted to the problems of the coach:

* * *

To K. H. (Ken) Somerville, director on physical education at Monticello, N. Y., high school went the top award.

* * *

He told how Cooper, a Monticello high jumper, scraped off the bar as he attempted to clear 5 feet 4 inches. The bamboo barrier fell to the ground—and bounced back to the identical pegs from which it had been pushed.

Don Cowen, superintendent of schools at Kinross, Ia., related a freak baseball play that wound up in a triple killing.

* * *

The CCC mines from Clarinda and Shenandoah, Ia., were in the last half of the ninth inning of a 1 to 0 baseball game with Shenandoah in the lead. Clarinda had a man on second and another on first with none out.

* * *

The next batter lifted a high fly to shallow centerfield. The ball squirted out of the gardener's hands and into the glove of the second baseman. He touched the base and then, apparently believing the side retired, started for the bench and only casually touched the runner trying to return to first for the final out.

British scientist says the human race will be entirely bald 1,000 years from now. Is that a fact—or just another of those hair-raising European rumors?

BOILING STOCK MARKET SHOWS WAR TENSION

Early Liquidation Attributed to Overseas Developments; Wheat Drops.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Another boiling stock market, mostly on the selling side, today exemplified continuance of pessimism over European war developments.

Early liquidation was attributed mainly to indications the Allies still are having tough going in Holland and Belgium and to fears in some quarters that, if the worst comes, the United States might possibly become involved.

Bonds, including U. S. governments, weakened and commodities were irregularly lower. "Free" Sterling improved.

Lack of support for motor stocks was depressing, both General Motors and Chrysler being well down from the start. Prominent on the extension of the slide were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, du-Pont, Union Carbide, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical and J. I. Case.

Noted was the announcement the Anglo-French purchasing commission had placed new contracts for fighting planes aggregating $150,000,000.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Wheat prices dropped more than a cent a bushel in early dealings today, the decline wiping out the last of the advance after Germany began its invasion of the lowlands. War news continued to dominate the market.

Opening ⅞-1⅛ lower, May $1.04½, July $1.01⅜-⅝, wheat later held this range and at times recovered fractionally. Corn started ⅜—1 cent lower, May 66-66⅛ July 66¾

JURY RECESSES AFTER HANDLING TWO WILL CASES

Upholds One, Sets Aside 2nd; Panel to Return to Court Work on Thursday.

Clearing its docket for the first three days of the week, the county petit jury recessed yesterday until Thursday morning.

The jury heard two contested will cases yesterday and a third case on the calendar was continued because the defendant was unable to appear for the trial.

The jurors found yesterday that the purported will of the late Mary V. Phelps was not her will and ruled it out.

Legality of the paper was contested in an action filed by Mattie L. Castor and others against Paul Walker and Glenn W. Maglott.

The alleged will left the estate to Dan Castor, one of the plaintiffs, and Paul Walker, a defendant ,and nominated Maglott as executor.

In another case heard yesterday, the jury upheld the will of Mike Sferro.

Five other cases were on the calendar for trial, beginning today, but it was expected that most of them will be continued or settled.

16 SCIENTISTS

Reveal Great Discovery About

CONSTIPATION

Tests of World-Famous Hospital Show How To Help Nature Produce Her Own Gentle, Complete "Daily" Bowel Action!

NEW YORK: Constipation sufferers rejoice! For now violent cathartics and laxatives and harsh "roughage" products, many of which are habit forming and are often irritating to bowel lining—can be avoided.

You can now actually help Nature produce her own gentle, complete "daily" bowel movements—thanks to the patient study of 16 Scientists.

You see if waste matter in the colon isn't kept moist it becomes hard, dry, caked and results in constipation. These scientists discovered that a "little daily dose" of Kruschen actually keeps this waste matter moist, soft and easy to expel. Also acts as a mild enlarid and kidney diuretic.

There is no nausea, no griping, no violence with Kruschen. Hospital tests report: "Kruschen can be taken for years without having to increase the dose." Inexpensive! Only a trifle for a jar that lasts weeks. Over 245,000,000 jars of Kruschen have been sold throout the world. Kruschen must do the work!

Now Comes in New Delightful Tasting "Bubbling" Form!

City Calls for Sealed Bids on Address Machine

City officials today called for sealed bids on a metal plate making machine to be purchased for the water, sewer and garbage department office.

Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said proposals would be received in his office until noon, Wednesday May 29, on the machine to be used in connection with addressing equipment in the office of the municipal department at city hall. The price of which is not to exceed $975.

City council at its May 7 meeting appropriated $1,200 from the water, sewer and garbage funds to meet the expenditure and the cost of additional plates to be purchased in making anticipated address changes in accounts.

Council has under consideration changing the billing from east and west of Main street to north and south of Park avenue to more evenly distribute the accounts.

This calls for new address plates. Another 5,000 changes are expected when present incorrect house numbers are revised.

SEEK OPINIONS ON GAME LAWS

Conservation Leaders Arrange Public Meeting at Park Pavilion Thursday.

A public meeting and hearing on Ohio hunting laws will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday in the North Lake park pavilion to give hunters and sportsmen an opportunity to become more familiar with the laws.

The meeting is being sponsored by district No. 2 of the Ohio Division of Conservation and Natural Resources, and is one of 88 being held throughout the state this month, according to J. R. Heilman, chairman of the Richland County Conservation group.

Questionnaires will be given those attending in an effort to learn the sentiment of sportsmen and farmers on the present laws. Among phases of the laws to be discussed are bag limits, seasons, trappers, license, restocking, licensing of fur bearing animals and propagations.

Farmers, farm group representatives and sportsmen are especially invited to attend the meeting, Heilman said.

The population of the Falkland Islands, British Crown colony in the South Atlantic, is about 2,500.

Nazis Gain In Greatest Battle World Has Seen

Fighting Centers Along Meuse River; Germans Support Troops With Air Armada of 6,000 Planes.

—10 miles inside the French border in the fortified Franco-Belgian defense zone—directly before France's "little Maginot" line extension to the North sea.

It was here that France suffered her most disastrous defeat of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870.

The British acknowledged that Nazi blitzkrieg legions were driving through southern Holland to make the situation there "extremely serious" for the Allies.

The Dutch field army defending western Holland fell back before the savage German onslaught, retiring to their main water-line defense line in Utrecht province, the high command announced.

Berlin reported German forces in central Holland had blasted through the Dutch Grebbe defense system and were advancing toward Utrecht.

Lord Gort, commander-in-chief of the British expeditionary force in the lowlands, cheered his troops with a message:

"The struggle will be hard and long, but we can be confident of final victory."

The French acknowledged that the Germans reached Sedan in a push which took them to the Meuse river on an 80-mile front. The long-awaited great battle of the west was on in full fury along this prepared line of resistance.

In the north, another German spearhead seemed to have cut all the way through the Netherlands, joining land forces with plane-landed Nazi troops dropped on Rotterdam in the early hours of the invasion which started last Friday.

It appeared that Germany might have any or all of these objectives:

1 to drive through the low countries and establish Nazi bases on the North sea within short striking distance of England.

2 To attack frontally the northern Maginot line below Belgium, where the French defenses are not as long-established as along the German frontier.

3 To flank the Maginot line at its northern end.

One thing both the Allies and the Germans agreed on: That the current action was the start of a great, decisive encounter between the full forces of the opposing armies on which may pivot the outcome of the war.

Berlin authorized sources spoke of joy among the Nazi high command over the progress of German arms.

The Netherlands army, its government and queen fled to England, fought on against an ever-crushing German offensive. Germany claimed two-thirds of the country.

British troops rushed to bolster the hard-pressed Belgians who were falling back, apparently on the River Meuse-Albert canal salient.

England, host to the Dutch royal family and government, received many refugees streaming out of their Netherlands homeland.

A repercussion of the German invasion of the Netherlands was a Japanese protest against reported anti-Japanese demonstrations at Batavia, in the Dutch East Indies.

French Concede Sedan's Fall to Fast-Moving Nazis

(By Associated Press)

PARIS—A French military spokesman conceded this morning that the city of Sedan, 10 miles within France in the fortified border zone below the Belgian border, "probably had been taken" by German attackers.

The high command earlier had admitted that the Germans, gaining momentum in their push through southeastern Belgium, had crossed France's northern border and it was generally conceded that the long-awaited "great battle of the west" had at last begun.

The German advance, the French communique disclosed, was part of a push which carried the Germans to the Meuse river on an 80-mile front extending northward from Sedan through the Belgian town of Namur to Liege, key point in Belgium's eastern defenses.

Military advices indicated that it was along this line that the Allies planned to make their stand against the Germans in a battle expected to prove a decisive factor in the outcome of the entire war.

The Germans were reported to have concentrated a massive attack, supported by tanks and airplanes, in the Sedan sector. The town, which is on the south bank of the Meuse, was emptied of its civilian population.

Equally heavy fighting was reported by the French at the Belgian town of Dinant, 15 miles south of Namur on the Meuse.

Dinant likewise was abandoned by civilians.

Nazis Claim Belgians and Dutch Forces Split By Wedge

BULLETIN

BERLIN—(AP)—It was announced officially tonight that German fighting planes shot down 70 enemy planes in the Sedan area near the French-Belgian border today.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—The Belgian and Dutch armies have been separated by a powerful German wedge, DNB, official German news agency, reported today from the western front.

It said that French and British forces were unable to reach the Dutch armies to help them and that the Dutch, therefore, either must surrender or be annihilated.

The German tactics, DNB declared, rendered unimportant Belgium's Albert canal position which was conceived as a strong defense line between the North sea coast at Antwerp and Liege, near the German frontier—in other words, from the Scheldt river to the Meuse.

German troops crossed into France today, the fifth day of the Nazi blitzkrieg through the lowlands, and the Nazi high command declared they also had smashed through key defenses in Belgium and the Netherlands.

Today's communique claimed these successes:

FRANCE

"The French-Luxembourg and French-Belgian border up to the point of Mezieres-Charleville has been reached nearly everywhere and crossed in many places.

(A French war office spokesman in Paris acknowledged that Sedan, in the fortified zone 10 miles below the Belgian frontier, probably was in German hands.)

HOLLAND

". . . We succeeded in expanding our piercing of the Grebbe line southeastward of Amersfoort and gained area in the direction of Utrecht. . . . Our troops . . . pierced through as far as Rotterdam."

BELGIUM

"The city of Liege is in German hands. In the region south of the line from Liege to Namur our troops left the Ardennes (mountains) behind and vanguards reached the Meuse between Namur and Givet."

(Both French and British military sources dispute the German claims to Liege. They say the only fort in the Liege defenses captured by the Germans is Eben Emael, 10 miles to the north.)

Dutch Troops Fall Back To Main Water Line Defenses

(By Associated Press)

AMSTERDAM—The Dutch field army defending western Holland has fallen back before the German attack to their strong, main water defense line in Utrecht province, the high command announced today.

The communique was issued by Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander-in-chief of Holland's land and sea forces and the highest representative in Holland of the Dutch government, which now is in England.

He announced that German forces in control of northeastern provinces had failed in an attempt to capture the vital 16-mile dike separating the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee) from the North sea.

The commander-in-chief said the government left Holland in view of its duties to the entire kingdom, including the Dutch overseas possessions, and could carry on as well in London as in The Hague.

The communique summed up the military situation as follows:

"In the northern provinces the enemy has established himself. An attempt to force the Ijsselmeer dyke has failed up to now.

"The northern part of Rotterdam is firmly in our hands.

"The field army retreated last night and now holds our well-known new Dutch waterline.

"The position of Den Helder (North sea naval base) is intact.

"The situation in Brabant is uncertain.

"The province of Zeeland is firmly in our hands.

"Our air defense remains, notwithstanding heavy losses, very active.

"The struggle is heavy. However, it is worth our while. Our independent national existence, which we won centuries ago under the leadership of the Oranges, is at stake. Long live Her Majesty the Queen. Long live our native country."

With the entire royal family, headed by 59-year-old Queen Wilhelmina, and including Princess Juliana, Prince Bernhard and their two daughters, Beatrix and Irene, safely transported to England and The Hague abandoned as seat of the government, authorities continued their round-up of persons suspected of "fifth-column" activities.

The arrest of 300 in Amsterdam yesterday made a total of 900 taken into custody since the war began.

New Allied Help Arrives To Bolster Belgian Forces

BULLETIN

BRUSSELS — (UP) — Belgium, fighting German armies advancing toward France and Brussels and Antwerp, today called all men of the second reserve to immediate duty with the colors. The second reserve comprises all men between 16 and 35 who had previously been temporarily exempted from military service.

(By International News Service)

BRUSSELS—Large reinforcements of British and French troops, with artillery, tanks and automatic weapons, have arrived in Belgium in the last 48 hours and taken up strong positions beside Belgian defenders, it was reported today.

This new help arrived at a moment when the hard-pressed Belgians were falling back to prepared positions. While falling back, Belgian and French units carried out spirited counter-attacks against the German juggernaut.

Meanwhile, Belgian civilians loosed their hatred of the Nazi invaders against German parachutists, literally tearing one limb from limb when he landed in a suburb of Brussels. At other points in this vicinity parachutists were lynched by crowds.

WHITE HOUSE RUSHES U. S. PREPARATION

Nation Faces Tax Boost or Rising Debt in Arms Expansion.

against the latest phase of German aggression was expressed by the state department to the Panamanian minister for foreign affairs. Panama had forwarded a Uruguayan plan for such a protest.

The government is grimly preparing for war and hoping for peace.

The western hemisphere is nervously alert.

There were indications that the United States' answer to the modern war technique developed by Germany would be a splurge in fighting aircraft and mechanized land forces. Anti-aircraft and anti-tank equipment probably is high on the list.

Chairman Andrew J. May and Carl Vinson of the house military and naval affairs committees have been invited to confer with Mr. Roosevelt at 12:45 p. m. EST

"I'm for anything the president asks," said May. "If he says we need $1,000,000,000 (B) for the army and navy, I'm for it. We ought to have a national defense set up or quit talking about it."

Vinson was complacent. "The navy is in magnificent shape," he said, "with 303 ships in commission, 3,200 airplanes and a training program that is producing 100 pilots a month."

South American nations, meantime, are fearful that the defense line drawn around the new world by President Roosevelt will not insulate the 21 republics from war. Western hemisphere statesmen are warning that the Atlantic barrier does not make the new world immune to epidemic European conflict.

Assistant Senate Republican Leader Warren R. Austin, declaring that "democracies are at the brink of disaster," urged congress today to aid the Allies by lifting bans on loans to debt-defaulting nations.

"I sincerely believe in aiding the Allies to the limit, short of becoming a belligerent in this inhuman conflict," Austin said in an interview. "I disagree positively with the theory that if we give them money, we eventually will give them men."

Referring to the 1934 Johnson act, which prohibits any person from making a loan to a foreign government in default in its obligations to this country, he said:

"I would preserve the principles of the Johnson act, but I would amend it so that its restrictions could be suspended in the case of the Allies. You don't have to become a belligerent in order to aid the democracies to win this war.

"After all, we must remember that a great crisis has come upon us. All the things we fought for in the World war are in the balance now."

Chairman Key Pittman of the senate foreign relations committee, which handled the Johnson act six years ago, said he doubted whether an attempt would be made at this session of congress to alter that law or to disturb rigid credit restrictions in the neutrality act.

Hull Warns Against New 'Dark Age' of Anarchy.

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The United States, while holding an abiding belief in international law and justice as the only saviors of civilization, believes that it must arm strongly in defense against the forces of international anarchy.

This was the substance of an address broadcast to the world last night by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who spoke directly to the American Society of International Law. He is president of the organization.

Taking a gloomy view of the immediate world outlook in these times of widespread aggression, the secretary told the assembled jurists and thousands of radio listeners:

"The specter of a new descent into the conditions of international anarchy which characterized the dark ages looms on the horizon today. I am profoundly convinced that it menaces the civilized existense of mankind—of every nation and every individual. Every nation and every individual should be actively on guard.

"Our own nation—powerful as it is and determined as it is to remain at peace, to preserve its cherished institutions and to promote the welfare of its citizens—is not secure against that menace. We can not shut it out by attempting to isolate and insulate ourselves. . .

"We can not close our eyes to what is going on elsewhere in the world and delude ourselves with the mere hope that somehow — somehow — all this will pass us by.

"In the face of existing conditions, we have no choice but to expand our program of armament construction to a degree necessary to provide fully adequate means of defending this country's security and its rightful interests."

Late War Flashes

VANCOUVER, B. C. — (U P) — The Canadian legion, aiarmed by the presence of 5,000 Germans within a 20-block area in South Vancouver, today asked Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King immediately to intern all enemy aliens and place under constant supervision all former enemy aliens now naturalized.

LONDON—(INS)—Military experts in London admitted tonight that Nazi Germany is making "unpleasantly good progress" in its double assault through Belgium and Holland and southward toward the Maginot line.

LONDON — (INS) — A new flame-throwing tank which can catapult a deadly streak of fire for 90 yards was used by the Germans in their motorized assault on the Liege fortresses in Belgium, the Daily Telegraph reported today.

AMSTERDAM —(AP)— Huge petroleum stores in Amsterdam were set afire today by the Dutch as a defense measure, it was officially announced, as the Dutch army defending western Holland fell back to its main water defense line.

LONDON—(AP)—A Dutch official who arrived today told of 14 big German transport planes landing at the airdrome between The Hague and Rotterdam, believing it to be in German hands. Every man in the planes was captured.

LONDON —(U P)— Sir Frederick Whyte, director of the American division of the ministry of information, said in a speech today: "The best we can do is to hold our tongues, hope for the best, and preserve our patience in the belief that in the last resort, the United States will be standing where we want them."

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The White House disclosed today that President Roosevelt expected to leave to congress a decision on whether to finance expected increased defense costs by enacting new taxes or raising the federal debt limit and borrowing the money.

11,000 VOTES INDICATED IN PRIMARY HERE

Fair Weather Expected to Cut Farm Vote as Campaign Comes to Showdown.

to gain in smaller cities and rural areas.

Cleveland reported "lively voting" while other large cities said the vote was light or normal. Youngstown observers predicted the Democrats would out-vote Republicans 30,000 to 28,000, which would mean a gain of 6,000 for the Republicans over the 1938 primary.

In Cleveland, board of elections officials estimated the Democratic vote at between 110,000 and 120,000 and the Republican vote at 90,000 to 100,000. The primary there was enlivened by the heated contest between Mayor Harold H. Burton and Congressman Dudley White of Norwalk for the Republican senatorial nomination.

State-wide interest was centered in the Democratic race for governor where former Governor Martin L. Davey of Kent was conceded an edge in his comeback campaign.

Davey, who is estimated to have spent nearly $100,000 to avenge his 1938 primary defeat, was opposed by six other Democrats for the nomination, but his opposition was not organized. Former Governor George White of Marietta and William J. Kennedy of Cleveland were conceded the best chance to defeat Davey.

Rain or shine, The News-Journal will have its election party tonight as usual. Returns on all of the county, district, and state contests will be available by telephone or from a big screen across Walnut street from The News-Journal building. Because the count will be slow after polls close at 6:30 p. m., returns will not be available before 9 or 9:30 p. m., election officials believe.

Watch With Interest.

Also watched with interest in today's election is an attempt by the Republican state organization to nominate George Neffner for secretary of state over Edward J. Hummel of Cincinnati. Neffner was appointed to the post several weeks ago following the death of Earl Griffith of Mt. Gilead who was a candidate for re-election.

Police supervised balloting in two Circleville wards today to nip possible attempts to buy and sell votes after Democratic and Republican leaders in the city appealed to the secretary of state to stop vote-buying in Pickaway county.

While voters today will choose delegates to the two national conventions pledged to Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, and Charles Sawyer, Democrat, for the presidential nomination, the results were not expected to indicate very conclusively how the state will vote for president in the fall. Sawyer is a "stalking horse" for President Roosevelt who will receive the Democratic delegates' vote if he is a candidate for a third term.

In most of the state the vote tabulation will be slow tonight because of the large number of candidates, but Cincinnati will try a new central counting system that is expected to speed up the count by several hours. As soon as the voting places in Cincinnati and Hamilton county close, the ballots will be taken to Music Hall where 1,447 counters will tabulate the vote for the entire county and city.

Happy is the nation whose campaigns are merely political and oratorical.

At one women's club meeting the subject for roll call response was "What a dime will buy"—thus assuring brief remarks.

An item from Florida tells of an alligator that died because it didn't know enough to back out of a hole—which reminds that the national debt is now at the highest point in history.

Long Primary Tickets Confusing

OUT of the maze of candidates with which ballots are cluttered at today's primaries, one will emerge as winner of the nomination in each of the contests, and, in some instances, a half dozen or more will be losers.

This is especially in evidence on the Democratic state primary ticket, with seven candidates for nomination as governor; eleven for lieutenant governor; seven for secretary of state and five for attorney general.

Aside from seven candidates for nomination as auditor, the Republican state ticket is not so confusing, although with many voters these aspirants for an important office are little more than names.

An unfortunate phase of the primary system, as applied to choice of nominees for state offices, is the impossibility of voters learning of the comparative qualifications of all candidates and making an intelligent choice of the one best fitted for the office to which he aspires.

While this is less difficult in contests for county offices, the fact remains that only a small percentage of voters are acquainted with all of the candidates and that their preference is influenced, in many instances, by considerations entirely aside from fitness for the office sought.

Although the theory which makes it easy for any one to become a candidate for nomination for any office, by securing a small number of signers to a petition, is admirable in its intent, it has the disadvantage of lengthening primary ballots to the point of preventing some voters from even attempting to choose from among a long list of candidates about whom they know nothing.

Did the Census-Taker Miss You?

QUITE a number of persons in various areas either were not at home when census takers called or missed the count for some other reason. The director of the canvass has now asked all such persons to make their presence known promptly so the books can be closed. A postcard form has been suggested, like this:

"To the best of my knowledge I have not been included in the 16th decennial census of population which has just been taken in this community. In addition to myself there are also—members of my family who have been omitted."

It should be signed with name and full address now and previous address if the writer has moved since April 1, 1940.

It is likely that the persons missed want to be registered. When the count began, it was found that nearly everyone was eager to be included and welcomed the enumerators. In fact, many people were rather disappointed to find that they weren't asked so many questions as they had anticipated and that the census man or woman didn't have time to listen to all the family history they volunteered to tell.

As Shirley Grows Up

FEW will question the wisdom of Mr. and Mrs. George Temple in at least temporarily withdrawing their daughter Shirley from the screen.

The disappointment expressed by many of those who saw Shirley in "The Blue Bird" serves as quite convincing proof that, at the age of 11 she has lost much of the appeal of "cuteness" which carried her through four years as No. 1 star of the screen.

As a child star Shirley showed an amazing grasp of acting requirements for her various roles, and as an older girl—within a few years—it seems likely that developing histrionic ability will bring her back to public attention in parts which will fit her age.

Meanwhile, however, it seems like a wise mother who has decided that, for the present, she will not deprive her daughter "of those normal, natural benefits that may be derived from mingling and competing with a large number of children."

No Death Penalty In Michigan

MICHIGAN is apparently becoming less satisfied with abolishment of the death penalty for premeditated murder.

Some Michigan people wonder if a life sentence to prison meets the needs in a recent case of a gangster, guilty of "two sordid, cold-blooded murders," who stared stonily at the judge while being sentenced to prison for life.

Commenting on this incident, the Detroit News says: "Kurzawa lives on, maintained by the state, his escape or a commutation of sentence possible. Michigan needs the additional protection which would have compelled Kurzawa to stare at the judge, perhaps not so brazenly, as he was being sentenced to death."

When more people recognize such criminals as the dangerous wild beasts that they really are, instead of classifying them as human beings, there will be more general agreement with the contention that they should be exterminated by execution, rather than being permitted to live through possibly many years as a constant menace to others.

How Voyagers Rest Their Minds

THE emptiness of the average human mind on a sea voyage is well known, but here's a news item that suggests some sort of record. It deals with the momentous invention of a new game introduced recently on a Panama liner.

"Each of six contestants," it is revealed, "is armed with blunt scissors and a 25-foot strip of ordinary mending tape half an inch wide. Bets are placed on the players in the same way as horse racing. The object is to split the entire length of tape from one end to the other without a break."

So the fastest and most talented cutter wins, and is probably awarded some sort of prize, for spoiling 25 feet of tape.

Maybe somebody aboard prefers to read a book or appreciates the Gulf Stream and porpoises, flying fish, frigate birds, sunsets and stars, and suchlike odds and ends. But anyway, with all the thinking that people do on land, minds have to be rested somehow, and an ocean voyage may be the proper place.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Wendell Willkie is a rugged, good looking Wall Street man who holds down a $75,000 a year job with one of the big utilities holding corporations. He is now being favorably mentioned as a prospective candidate for another important job that similarly pays a $75,000 a year salary—the Presidency.

The best break Mr. Willkie ever got from a standpoint of favorably impressing the public—was when he accepted an invitation recently to appear as "guest expert" on the famed Information Please program.

It happened this way. When the invitation came, Willkie's advisers argued against it. There was some logic to their arguments. Information Please has come to mean the epitome of glibness and wit in the public esteem. Guests who acquit themselves well are highly thought of. Those who remain mum, or make a bad showing, are torn limb from limb around thousands of supper tables from coast to coast. After all, when you go up against F. P. A., Kieran, Levant, etc., you are in fast company. Mentally they are as agile as monkeys. "Why risk making a bad showing," Willkie's friends argued, "in a racket you know nothing about?"

* * *

WILLKIE rubbed his chin for a minute. "What is this program?" he asked. "I've never heard it."

So they explained what it was. "I'll listen in tonight," said Willkie, "and see for myself."

Meanwhile, representatives of Mr. Willkie reported back to Information Please. "It was probable that Mr. Wilkie would have to go to Washington," they said. They couldn't give a definite answer at the moment.

That night, Mr. Willkie went to his radio and hunted up the Information Please program. On the board was a distinguished guest who did not do so well. Hearing the mental shenanigans over the air, and noting the shortcomings of the current "guest," Willkie was surprised, and then delighted. He knew the answers to all or most of the questions they asked. Yes, sir, he would like very much to accept an Information Please invitation, just for fun.

* * *

THE point is that not only the listening audience, but the wary old experts themselves, were delighted with Mr. Willkie's performance. He glittered. He fairly walked off with the program. John Kieran said, "You must do a lot of reading," to which he replied, "Not as much as I'd like to. I don't have much time for reading."

Later, it was agreed Wendell Willkie had set a new "high" for guests on that program. No other celebrity—and the list includes everyone from Alexander Woollcott to Dorothy Thompson—ever has won such plaudits.

As for his political ambitions—he does not admit he is a candidate for President. He has entered no primaries. He has no little bag of delegates to shout his name at the convention. But—and this is important—a stalemate between, say, Taft nad Dewey might bring his name squarely to the fore. And who is he to say nay if the nomination is tossed, like an unexpected plum, into his size 7½ felt hat?

High Court's New Deal Trend

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

IF A REPUBLICAN is elected president next November, it already has been remarked that he'll have a Democratic senate on his hands for at least two years. This, of course, is because only one-third of the senators' terms expire at the same time. And the senate is so strongly Democratic now that, if the Republicans win every one of this year's vacancies, they still won't have a senate majority. They'll have to wait, at the earliest, until the next election day.

Justice McReynolds

That will mean an uncomfortable two years for the Republican president, supposing that a Republican is chosen. However, assuming that he turns out to be satisfactorily and popular, he probably will get the kind of senate he wants in 1942. He won't be stymied indefinitely.

But the supreme court?

It will take heaven alone knows how long for any president to make over that outfit into an anti-New Deal group.

Just one lone member of that bench is of the old-fashioned conservative pattern—Justice James Clark McReynolds. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Justices Harlan F. Stone and Owen J. Roberts ante-date the Roosevelt regime, but even they don't class as out-and-out Tories.

Yet, for the sake of argument, let's group Hughes, McReynolds, Stone and Roberts together.

A Definite Minority.

Still they're a minority.

The majority consists of Justices Hugo Black, Stanley Reed, Felix Frankfurter, William Douglas and Frank Murphy. And they have been ardent New Dealers!

Whatever president would like to reorganize that quintet will not be delayed for any mere two years. He'll be tied up until the whole five of them die off gradually. They're comparatively young, too. It will take a succession of several presidents to attend to them.

How the supreme bench lines up at present was illustrated recently by its decision on the question of labor's right to picket a strike-bound employer's establishment.

Justice Murphy read the court's finding. It was to the effect that picketing is a form of free speech—consequently strictly constitutional. That was the view that Murphy might have been expected to take. Justice Black, Reed, Frankfurter and Douglas agreed with him.

That also was to have been expected.

Verdict a Surprise.

Advance guesses were made to the purport that Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Stone and Roberts would be conservative enough to take an anti-picketing attitude. But they didn't. They voted with the New Dealers.

Justice McReynolds was the lone dissenter.

The fact is that Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Stone and Roberts have turned more liberal in the last few years than was anticipated when they were appointed.

Paradoxically, Justice McReynolds was considered a pretty good liberal at the time he was appointed. The court then was middling conservative and he was regarded as promising to be a very modifying influence. Instead, he's the sole survivor of the court's "last man" conservative club.

A Good Lawyer.

McReynolds is a corking good lawyer. His own associates, while disagreeing with him, say his legal reasoning is sound, according to his benighted lights.

McReynolds isn't an ugly old man: he's likable.

Anyway, the federal supreme court is due to be a bad headache to a comparatively conservative administration, if it happens to get in.

With political good luck it can get the sort of congress to support it by 1942, after a couple of miserable years in the meantime. But, naturally, its opponents will fall back on the supreme court to nullify congress as much as possible.

The supreme court can't do it 100 per cent, but it's quite potent.

Furthermore, such a situation may not follow. Perhaps the next administration will be as New Dealish as this one, with a New Deal congress likewise. In that event the whole set-up will be perfectly harmonious.

Health and Diet

Coffee Drinking As a Habit.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE IMAM of Shehodet Monastery decided to make a drink out of some berries that had been growing on a bush on a nearby hillside. The berries were hard and black and, though crushed with a spoon, he could not dissolve them in cold water. But on heating them in a chafing dish over the embers on his hearth, they sweated and dried, and darkened, so that when he crushed them in a mortar and poured boiling water on them, he made a dark brew with a pleasant and stimulating aroma.

He poured himself a beaker of the steaming decoction, which had a bitter, woodenish taste, but created a soothing glow over his mind and body. He lay down and composed himself for sleep, but sleep did not come. Instead, a state of delicious mental activity, almost like an intoxication, ensued. The Imam, being a fervent Moslem, had had no experience with drunkenness and was afraid he had committed a mortal sin. He felt a quickened beating of his heart and he had a sense of lightness and power in his limbs. He took another beaker of the beverage and stayed awake all night. His mind was active, cheerful and alert. His thoughts were as if they were living animals. He finally fell into a light sleep and awoke refreshed.

First Coffee-Drinker.

This, according to tradition, is the first human experience with coffee. It has been a companion of human being ever since. Introduced into Europe in the 17th century, it drove out alcoholic beverages. It had popular appeal and coffee houses were established where the beverage was taken incessantly. Some of the modern coffee-drinkers who acquire a reputation for consuming 30 cups a day would have been considered amateurs in those days.

The effects which the ancient Imam noticed are still the ones which make it popular—a sense of lively intellectuation, relief of fatigue, increased muscular tone and strength of the heart beat.

Naturally, any beverage which gives as much human happiness as coffee will soon be regarded by the puritanical element in the population as being harmful. The puritans do not want any human being to have a good time, and any artificial means to that end is immediately suspect.

Difficult to Prove.

When it comes to coffee, however, they have a hard time to prove their point. Of course, the excessive use of any medicament is more or less harmful, but caffeine probably never causes anything but functional changes—no permanent tissue damage, no matter in what quantity it is taken.

A prominent writer on the effects of drugs say, "It is important to remember that caffeine has no effect on brain protoplasm except to increase its functional activity. Caffeine does not produce brain exhaustion unless it is taken in such a manner and in such large quantities as to interfere with sleep, rest and the taking of food in ordinary quantities. It has been shown that an individual is enabled to do more mental work in a given space of time with caffeine than he is capable of doing without it, and that this increased work is not followed by depression or exhaustion. In other words, it acts as a lubricant does in machinery, increasing ability without causing exhaustion."

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Remembered Courage.

It helps me to remember this,
Your courage in the face
Of danger, that hard time of long
Ago. No time or space.

Can dim the memory of that,
And as there comes to me,
In day to day, the trial, test,
Again your strength I see.

And I am heartened, I take up
My own hardships and go
More confident because of this,
Your courage, long ago.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Some devastating criticism of the British army has been cabled out of Norway and London, but it was not half so critical as the confidential information collected by our own military observers and cabled back to Washington.

This information describes inefficiency, stupidity and lack of coordination almost beyond belief. Also it reveals that Hore-Belisha, deposed war minister of the Chamberlain cabinet, was absolutely right in advocating reorganization of the army.

Here are some of the unbelievable boners pulled by the British army in Norway:

1. When the British landed at Andalsnes, they put ashore 460 anti-tank guns, but not a single round of ammunition for them. The ammunition was down in the hold of another ship.

In short, the British have not yet remedied the mistake they made in the Boer war (1899). They learned then that when a landing party goes ashore, it must be equipped with everything it needs, ready to go into action the minute it sets foot on land.

The U. S. army made the same mistake in the Spanish-American war, but has remedied it since. The British, however, dumped their goods on the shore in Norway, then proceeded to sort them out and distribute them.

* * *

Cut to Ribbons.

2. When the British landed two battalions at Namsos, they were without a single anti-tank or anti-aircraft gun. Yet their commanders knew they had to face German forces equipped with the latest tanks and supported by airplanes. As a result, the British were cut to pieces. One battalion lost 45 per cent of its men, the other 30 per cent.

3. There was absolutely no coordination between British land and air forces. The Royal Air Force is completely independent of the army and navy. This means that today, if a British army commander in France wants more air support, he has to telegraph back to London, which then gives orders to the air force. And what does a pundit sitting at a desk in London know about actual needs in the front line trenches?

In contrast, the German commander, General Von Falkenhorst, was in complete command of German naval, air and army units. He was also in command of communications, so no message could go back to Berlin without his permission.

* * *

Military Jealousy.

THE SAME jealousy exists between the British air force and the navy which once existed between U. S. armed services. For instance, the Royal Air Force limits the number of planes to be carried on airplane carriers (even though they come under the navy), and failed to replace those destroyed during normal pre-war operations. Result was that the plane carriers operating off Norway were short of planes.

According to U. S. military experts, all this is an outgrowth of the inertia and caste system of the British army. Officers get their rank through birth and social position, not ability. There is more emphasis on tradition than efficiency. "If it was good enough for my father it is good enough for me," has been the watchword of the British military (perhaps also of the Chamberlain cabinet).

Leslie Hore-Belisha started to root out some of these evils, but did not go nearly far enough. He only irritated the military nobility, without getting at the real weaknesses.

* * *

Baby Senator.

TODAY'S primary in West Virginia marks the end of one of the bitterest feuds in the senate—that between able Senator Matthew Neely and baby Senator Rush Dew Holt.

They have not spoken a single word to each other for over two years. When Neely took the oath of office after re-election, Holt refused to walk down the corridor with him, as is customary, while he placed his hand upon the Bible.

But today, they are united in opposing the West Virginia state house gang. Neely running for governor and Holt for senator.

That much is well-known. But the little dramatic incident which buried the hatchet has not been told. Neely had urged certain patronage appointments, mostly postmasterships, and he wanted them badly. But the appointments were held up by Holt, who is a member of the senate post offices committee.

One day, when Needy's candidates were brought up before the committee, Holt suddenly "lifted his finger"—that is, indicated his approval of the Neely men.

When the committee broke up, he encountered Senator Neely at the door. "Is that satisfactory to you, Senator?" said Holt, and Neely said it was.

That was all. After that, they got together for re-election.

* * *

Louisiana Purchase.

BEGINNING with the inauguration of a new governor today, Louisiana kicks out the Huey Long machine and allegedly turns over a new leaf.

But beginning today, also, Louisiana is in for more trouble. For one of the chief leaders among those who supported Governor Sam Houston Jones, and who will sit on the platform with him today, is being investigated for income tax evasion. He received certain funds from an oil company and forgot to chalk it up on his income tax.

This was in 1936, so the statute of limitations may have run out. But it has not run out on mail frauds, and the federal government, to be consistent, may have to prosecute.

Simultaneously, Governor Jones faces some severe tests. The whole United States is keeping an eye on him, especially certain Washington officials who helped pave the way for his election.

Real fact is that the justice department merely skimmed the cream in cleaning up Louisiana. It took the cases which fell under federal laws. There were scores of others which might come under state laws.

* * *

Gift From Gas.

FOR INSTANCE, one of the cases of alleged bribery was a gift of $125,000 to ex-Governor Leche from the United Gas Improvement company, a subsidiary of Electric Bond and Share. On the witness stand, Governor Leche admitted that he had received this money. In fact, he was careful to put it in his income tax return. Therefore the government had no case against him.

Furthermore, Tom Hill, political agent for United Gas, admitted on the witness stand that he had given this money to Leche. He said he considered it beneficial to the public relations of United Gas to have Governor Leche friendly. United Gas testified that it got no tax benefit from the gift, so Assistant Attorney General Rogge decided there was nothing illegal in the transaction under federal laws.

United Gas has a tremendous hold on the State of Louisiana. So also has Freeport Sulphur, a Mellon company. Both are reported to be friendly to new Governor Jones.

So it will be extremely interesting to watch the relations between them. State laws go much further than federal laws—if enforced.

Pastoral Music

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I WAS in the city, walking along a busy street, when, from a distance, I heard the music of an oldtime harmonica. It sounded strangely interesting, from where I was. I hurried closer.

Against the base of a tall building a blind man sat on the sidewalk. He held the instrument to his lips with both hands and played, unmindful of the crowd that stopped to listen—music wildly touching, so that even those who would hurry by stepped more softly and slackened pace, out of respect for the message that it bore.

His music spoke of peaceful pastoral scenes—I felt the homesickness and the longing for what was past. He was a boy again, roaming some high green slope at sunrise, the gentle wind bringing the cool morning tang to his moist brow. Shy, modest wildflowers bloomed. I almost saw the orchards, white and pink, upon the hillsides and caught the fragrance that floated on the air.

A cottage stood below the hill beside a stream. The wind whispered through the half-opened leaves of tall trees above the clapboard roof. An oriole sang and hung her nest among the branches. Lowing cattle came down a winding path at evening time.

The rusty tincup which the musician had placed beside him upon the concrete received many gifts. A tired scrubwoman drew out four coppers from her soiled apron and dropped them in. I believe it was all she had. A workman whose shoes and overalls were smeared with new raw clay reached into an ample pocket and threw in a nickel and a dime. A well-dressed man of the professional class took out his wallet and dropped in a quarter. As the music sang its way along the busy street where street cars clanged and traffic noised by, it found many hearers, who paused to pay tribute to the rustic artist.

When the business rush hour was over, I walked close and said, "You've done well today. The tincup is almost full, and you have given something worthwhile to all who listened."

He looked surprised. "D'ye think so? Why, I forgot I was playin'! I was recollectin' my boyhood days among the hills—before my blindness." His lips quivered as he added, "May always makes me feel like that."

Hails National Labor Act as Consolidating Influence

MURRAY TELLS STEEL WORKERS OF WAGE RISE

Lashes at Weirton Company in Speech to Annual SWOC Convention.

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, today hailed the National Labor Relations act as "a great assistance in creating and consolidating" a program he predicted will bring the organization 100 per cent membership in the nation's steel industry.

Reporting to the second national convention, Murray reviewed two years of activity since the SWOC was founded in December, 1937, and found that "we have won an average wage increase of 26 per cent" and signed contracts with 654 firms "stabilizing employment and wages for 550,000 workers."

"We are confident that the foundation has been laid for a union that will eventually embrace all the employes in the industry eligible for union membership and for the establishment of relations with management on a 100 per cent union basis," he asserted.

"Ultimately, we are confident the union will deal with the management on an industry-wide basis."

Acknowledging the influence of the National Labor Relations act on SWOC growth, Murray said "the existence among the federal statutes of this law has been a great assistance in creating, building up and consolidating the position of the SWOC."

The chairman's report opened the four-day session and was heard by 850 delegates from 823 lodges and four regional units.

John L. Lewis, president of the parent Congress of Industrial Organizations, will address the convention Wednesday. Thomas Kennedy, former lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania and secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, is another scheduled speaker.

Murray announced the convention will be requested to consider a constitutional framework for the SWOC which would permit it to embrace the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers. He said the proposal would form a "more unified" activity by CIO in the steel industry. The AAISTW is the union for which the SWOC now acts as organizing agent.

The AAISTW adopted a resolution favoring merger of the two units as a single body at its national convention at Pittsburgh, Murray said.

Expanding his two-year findings, the grey-haired chairman said relations with managements had become increasingly productive, but he cited Weirton Steel Co., as "having obstructed the process of the National Labor Relations board longer than any other employer in the United States.

Hhe charged the Weirton company with "roughhouse tactics" including "beatings of SWOC organizers." Other firms mentioned for "obstructionist" practices included American Rolling Mills Co., Bethlehem Steel and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

Murray said negotiations were under way with the Inland Steel Co., and heralded as a "complete victory" the federal court support of an NLRB order for reinstatement of 5,000 workers in the Republic Steel Co., and other "little steel" plants.

Father Discovers He's Taking Son to Prison in Stolen Car.

LANCASTER —(U.P.)— When Thomas Chester, 45, of Franklin, persuaded his son and a companion to return to the Boys' industrial school here he didn't realize until the trip was half over that he was riding in a stolen automobile.

Officials of the school reported today that Chester discovered his son, Herman, 17, and Herbert Allen, 19, of Cambridge, in Franklin and prevailed upon them to return to Lancaster.

The boys had a car which they said belonged to Allen's father, so Chester started to drive it back to the school. At Zanesville Allen jumped out and ran away. Herman confessed then that it was a stolen automobile.

The elder Chester took no chances. He and his son came from Zanesville to the institution in a taxicab.

General Pershing In Capital But Won't Talk War

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Hale and hearty Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the American armies, arrived in Washington today for an indefinite stay but declined to discuss any phase of the war.

He brushed aside reporters questions with the statement:

"I have nothing to say but how do you do. This is not the place to discuss matters of that kind."

Arriving from Hot Springs, Ark., in a private car, the general was met at the Union station by officers with whom he served in France when he commanded the AEF in the last World war.

The 79 year old veteran, nattily attired, said his plans to stay in Washington are indefinite. But he wouldn't comment when asked whether he had any conferences scheduled with the war department.

ASKS CAUTION

Green Urges 'Putting Brakes' on Hitler Criticism.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Government and economic leaders were cautioned by AFL President William Green today to "put on the brakes" in their criticism of Adolf Hitler and other totalitarian leaders lest they bring this country close to war.

Green said he "could be arrested" for his own thoughts concerning Hitler, but feared that "there is a grave danger of developing a war psychology as the result of our indignation over the invasion of Holland and Belgium by Hitler.

"We all need to put on the brakes, to speak carefully, and control ourselves in order to maintain strict neutrality in action at least," he said, emphasizing that he was not criticizing President Roosevelt or any specific government or industrial leader. He pointed out in his warning that America's declaration of war in 1917 was preceded by speeches fanning public indignation against Germany.

MORE RAIN DUE

Showers Forecast as Mercury Goes Up to 81 Again.

Much-needed rain is promised by the weather forecaster, who predicts showers for Wednesday. Gardens, held back so long by the unseasonable cold, are now suffering from a drought. The very light shower last night was of little benefit to parched lawns and gardens.

For the third time this year the temperature reached 81 today. It was the maximum for yesterday and also for May 6.

It remained fairly warm throughout the night, dropping only to 59. Just as the average temperature the past week was 15 degrees below normal, so the average of 70 for the past 24 hours was 15 degrees above normal.

Cooler weather, however, is "coming up" tomorrow, according to the forecast, accompanied by showers.

BRITISH AIR FORCE SHOWS RESISTANCE

Down 100 Nazi Planes During Continuous Action Since Last Friday.

By ROBERT G. NIXON
(INS Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN BELGIUM, (Passed By Field Censor)—Total war came to this war-scarred country today when the Allied armies came to grips with Germany's marching hordes.

While military secrecy shrouds the state of affairs on the ground, it can now be said that the Nazi air force is no longer able to command the skies without resistance.

In a three-day aerial blitzkrieg, British Royal Aair Force fighters have wrought incredible casualties on Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's pride.

In three days of the most desperate air fighting the world has ever known, R. A. F. fighter squadrons, combating tremendous odds, have successfully engaged German Aerial forces wherever they were met, leaving a trail of broken and burned German planes over many parts of Belgium and northern France.

British hurricane fighters, in the air continuously except when they have had to land to refuel and reload, have downed well over 100 German planes.

Against this heavy German loss, there have been only a few R. A. F. casualties. A few machines were shot down but in each case the pilots parachuted to safety. The German losses are estimated at ten or 12 times those of the British.

R. A. F. planes have been in constant action since 4:30 a. m. last Friday. On the first day, they were engaged in 81 battles and brought down 36 German planes. In one engagement, ten British fighters annihilated a squadron of 27 Germans.

In another battle, British fighters used 84,000 rounds of ammunition.

The pilots of these British planes are shattering all known records for aerial warfare, making the longest patrol flights ever known.

The fighters are operating far away from their bases, protecting British bombers from enemy fighters, while German troop concentrations and railheads have been sought out and plastered with bombs.

In some cases, the British have penetrated 80 miles inside German territory.

For the first time, Britain's famous Hush-Hush Boulton Paul Defiant is in the air. This is England's 400-mile an hour answer to Germany. One of these white-painted, immensely fast fighters brought down a German Ju-88 with its first burst of fire.

British reconnaissance machines have been virtually unmolested by German fighters. They have been attacked only on two occasions, and otherwise have flown ceaselessly over the advancing German armies, obtaining vital information for the Allies armies.

California Assembly Urges That Reds, Nazis be Stamped Out.

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—(U.P.)—A California assembly resolution, adopted 59 to 8, today asked congress to stamp out "fifth column" elements in this country before it falls a victim to the "blitzkrieg of Stalinism and Hitlerism."

It suggested that congress pass laws "stamping out once and forever traitorous "Trojan Horse" groups such as communists and Nazis" and warned that the United States might be next in line for invasion.

City Officials, State Highway Engineers Meet Today on New Proposals.

had failed to pass the necessary legislation to carry out the project which was set up by a former city administration, that "the project will be indefinitely delayed until the necessary legislation is passed."

He advised Locke that in order to include the West Fourth street paving project in one of the highway sales between the 10th and 15th of June, the legislation must be passed within the next ten days.

Shaffer pointed out that Mayor Claude M. Hunter, former mayor, had written him on Oct. 16, 1939, that city council had approved the project and agreed to proceed with it on the basis of the city paying for 50 per cent of the work, the city's share not to exceed $48,000, and that the state highway department has already paid for detailed plans, work schedules and preliminary data on the project.

City officials said today that if the group meeting today decided to change the type of improvement it would probably delay the work for several months.

Although preliminary work on the project was started some time ago, legislation appropriating the city's share of the money did not come before city council until May 7. Councilman Fred Miller, chairman of the finance committee, refused to approve the legislation until detailed estimates of the entire cost of the project were submitted to council by the state highway department.

He said that first estimates by the state did not specify WPA labor, but that since it has been included in the project, he believed the cost to the city should be less. Council unanimously backed his proposal to hold up the legislation until this point was cleared.

Favorite Food of Film Folk

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

FAVORITE FOODS of famous film folk always make interesting table news. Here is a recipe for curried shrimp that is often served by Claudette Colbert. Miss Colbert thinks that menus should be varied from time to time with spiced dishes, especially curried foods. To serve six, her cook uses one pint bottled milk, three tablespoons each butter, diced onion and flour, two teaspoons curry powder, teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, two cups canned or cooked shrimps. Melt butter, add onion and cook three minutes. Add flour, curry powder, salt and pepper and mix thoroughly. Pour milk from bottle slowly, stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Cook over hot water for 10 minutes. Drain shrimps, remove dark vein, and add to sauce. Heat thoroughly and serve in patty shells or on toast.

Baked veal with sweet potatoes—it sounds good and it is if you prepare it according to the favorite recipe of Ann Sothern. To serve six, use one-half pint milk, two and one-fourth pounds veal cutlet (in one piece), one-fourth cup each bread crumbs and flour, salt and pepper, two tablespoons shortening, pinch of soda, six sweet potatoes, peeled. Dredge cutlet in flour. Dip in undiluted milk, then in bread crumbs, flour, salt mixed.

Melt shortening in skillet and brown the breaded cutlet on both sides. Place in pan and add milk diluted with pinch of soda. Surround with sweet potatoes. Cover and bake in 275 degrees F. oven for an hour and a quarter. Serves six.

Priscilla's Favorite.

Priscilla Lane likes a dish that is a combination of two favorites—scalloped cheese and deviled ham. It is made with a pint of milk, two cups bread cubes spread with deviled ham, one-half cup American cheese cut into small pieces, three tablespoons butter, three slightly beaten eggs, one tablespoon minced onion, one-half teaspoon salt, dash of pepper. Cut crust from slices of bread, spread with deviled ham; cut into cubes and measure two cups. Alternate cubes with cheese in one and one-half quart casserole with bread as top layer. Top with butter. Combine milk with other items and pour over bread mixture. Place in pan of hot water and bake in 350 degrees F. oven for 75 minutes.

A glorified version of good old rice pudding is the contribution of Rosemary Lane. For this glamor rice pudding use a pint of milk, six tablespoons uncooked rice, three-eighths teaspoon salt, three eggs, separated, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract and rose geranium leaves. Cook the rice with the full pint of milk in double boiler until tender and until most of the milk has been absorbed, about one hour. Add the salt and egg yolks beaten with the sugar. Cook for two minutes longer. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites; remove from heater and cool. Add vanilla and put in a serving dish with a few washed rose geranium leaves here and there. Remove leaves before serving.

USE OF EVERGREENS IN ROCK GARDEN.

Rock gardens should be "well dressed" the year around. This can be achieved through the use of dwarf evergreens. Such evergreens not only add interest to a rock garden, but they also give it an air of permanence. There are many places where dwarf evergreens can be used to advantage, especially in the background and at the sides of steps leading to the rock garden.

Three forms of dwarf evergreens suitable for rock garden use are shown in the accompanying sketch. Figure 1 shows the creeping or ure 2, the half-erect or semi-erect spreading type of evergreen; Figtype, and Figure 3, the round, or globular form.

The creeping types, Juinperus Sargenti and J. Horizontalis, are especially useful for planting amid rocks.

Juniperus Sabina and J. Chinensis Pfitzeriana belong in the semi-growth is both upright and spread-erect group, since their habit of ing Thuga occidentalis Woodwardi and Taxus cuspidata nana are compact in growth and dark green in color. They belong to the globular group.

Nylon Hose, Newest Development In Women's Wear, Appear Here Tomorrow

By MARIANNE SPRINGER

ARRIVING in the Mansfield stores today, the new nylon hose will go on sale tomorrow morning, and Mansfield women will have the opportunity to wear, test and compare these stockings with their accustomed silk ones, just as their sisters from Maine to California will be doing.

With the opening of the official nylon sale in the stores of all leading American cities, the du Pont laboratories are, with their new synthetic development, opening fire on the Japanese silkworms. For this thread, which is made by a complicated chemical process of combining coal, water and air, is woven into stockings, that are destined to prove themselves superior in beauty and quality to the finest silk hosiery ever produced.

Tomorrow's supply of nylons will not meet the purchasing demand, because only 100,000 dozen pairs of the stockings will be available, and consequently there will be only a few dozen pairs in Mansfield. As a result of mechanical problems in developing the yarn, this scarcity undoubtedly will continue for some time.

(The volume of women's silk full-fashioned stockings sold in 1939 was over 43 million dozen pairs, which means some 137,000 dozen pairs were sold per week day.)

Nylon is, after all, just a yarn. The du Pont people manufacture it and then in turn sell it to various full-fashioned hosiery mills. The yarn can be produced in very sheer weights, but at the same time, it is stronger and more elastic than any other known thread of equal size. It is tough enough to wear well, can be dyed any color and is dull in appearance when finished.

Here's another reason for looking at legs this spring and summer—the new nylon stockings.

Nylon stockings will snag, but because of the tensile strength of the yarn and the special finishes used, they do so less than other hose.

They must, however, be treated with the same care that other silk hose are. That is, washed with gentle soap flakes and lukewarm water after each wearing. They dry with surprising quickness, and resume the appearance of new hose—all smooth and in shape.

There is a difference in the way nylons feel to the wearer because they don't have the natural cling of silk. They're smoother, feel slipperier and don't absorb perspiration as readily as silk. Women who have tested these stockings report that they lose consciousness of this difference after a few days.

The shades of this hosiery fall into a medium-beige group at the present time, and the customary prices will be $1.25 for 40-denier stockings (which correspond to three-thread silk hose) and $1.35 for 30-denier (which are equivalent to two-thread stockings).

Nylon stockings appear much sheerer than silk of the same weight, and they can't have rings or streaks, because nylon is an absolutely uniform product. Since nylon hose need less reinforcement, little or none shows even with the lowest-cut shoes.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"MAMAN'S bark is worse than her bite, as you say here in America," Princess Olina said a bit shakily as we walked down the stairs to the library. "And she was right. I was rude to you, but I am so excited over this new venture of mine."

"Of course you are," I said soothingly. "And—I never could misunderstand your mother. She is one of the finest people I have ever met."

"I know that," Olina answered, "and I am so glad she gave me her blessing before I left. I feel safer with it."

"I am sure you're going to be a success in this role," I said, "and will justify your mother's blessing."

"Thank you," she said earnestly, and then we were at the door of the library, and as I threw it wide, Philip Veritzen came toward us quickly.

I guessed that behind his suave expression he was furious at the delay, and I hastened my explanation before he could speak.

"Please blame me for our tardiness," I said. "I was unavoidably delayed upon my way upstairs."

"It does not matter,' he said grandiloquently, making a courtly bow to Olina. Then he took her hand and turned with her to the group of people facing us with carefully veiled but distinct curiosity in their eyes.

"Ladies and gentlemen!" he said "I have the honor to announce that Her Royal Highness, the Princess Olina of Transvania, has joined our cast, and is to have an important role in the play."

I was curious to see how Olina would react to it, and was relieved—and admiring—when I saw her put out her hands to the great producer with an appealing gesture of protest.

"Please!" she said "Won't you forget that title and ask the others to forget it, too? I am in exile over here, and I am no princess, only a worker. But I must have a name. Let me see!"

She put her fingers to her forehead with a pretty gesture of puzzlement! Then her face cleared and she turned to the group before her with the poise and composure which was her royal heritage.

"I know," she said, "that all of you must know and love Mr. Veritzen, and I am sure you will be glad to hear a great secret. I only hope he will forgive me for telling it. But every one will know soon that he is to marry my mother. So I think I ought to be known over here as Olina Veritzen. I hope you don't mind, Pa-pa dear."

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, May 15.

ACCORDING to a most benefic chain of lunar transits, this is a day of brilliant prospects for productiveness, progress and prosperity, with all things moving happily in the direction of fulfilled hopes and wishes. This good fortune will mostly be the fruition of patience, perseverance, steadfastness and industry. Those in power and influence are disposed to bestow rewards, tokens of preferment and generosity which will stabilize the fortunes, secure the future and enhance prestige and personal popularity. It is a time to reach for such high goals and gratifications.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of splendid opportunities for attaining high goals, with fulfilled ambitions increased fortunes, enhanced personal standing and honors, while friends in high places are ready to bestow rewards of merit and recognize sound achievement. It is a time for putting over major programs and campaigns, with the assurance of all worthwhile objectives being bounteously and happily secured. It is a year for great deeds.

A child born on this day may be bounteously endowed for attaining a high place in life through industry steadiness, responsibility and progressive and ambitious aims, backed up by much ability, talent and nobility of character. It should be unselfish, kindly and magnanimous.

Make-Up, Clothes Ensemble

By MME. QUI VIVE.

Which comes first, make up or dress? You'll guess the answer without half trying. Makeup, of course. You can change your clothes easier than you can change your face.

Only the smarties pause before buying, ponder on this and that, regard the effect upon eyes, hair, complexion, the figure and the type they happen to be. A heap of a lot of things to think about. But well worth the time and the trouble.

One need not keep always to the same lip pigment. Just so the shades belong to the same color tone. There are true reds, becoming to some, blue-reds better for others, orange-reds for other types. One must be keenly observing, find out what the lip cream will do to the skin. It must be flattering. It must make the face fresh and vivid. The wrong selection will prove the opposite, impart an appearance of fatigue or tack on a couple of birthdays that you haven't had.

If in doubt about this interesting problem go to a high-class beauty shop and seek the aid of the makeup specialist. She has open containers and, because of her experience as a portrait painter on living models, will be able to offer valuable suggestions.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY

Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE VERY BEST SPOT

IN DUPLICATE play, you attach much greater importance than in rubber bridge to finding the contract which will produce the maximum number of points for your side. You are not interested merely in reaching the game, small slam or grand slam safely, but want to be in the suit or No Trump which will produce a few more points than some other choice. The few extra points may mean that you win the deal from your rivals, whereas in rubber bridge you look for a slight bit greater safety at the cost of giving up a few points, if necessary, because of the rank of declarations.

(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♥
Pass	3 ♥	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♣	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♦	Pass	5 NT
Pass	6 ♦	Pass	6 ♥

Two brilliant Walters—Beinecke in the North and Malowan in the South—bid this deal with extreme thoroughness to reach the safest maximum contract in the recent Vanderbilt Cup national championship tournament.

Mr. Beinecke's 3-Hearts bid was safer, following his opening pass, than 2-Hearts, which might be passed when it looked as if a game was certain. Mr. Malowan's 3-Spades was meant to show the A only, as a cue bid, and ask for his partner's lowest A, which was shown with the 4-Clubs. The Blackwood convention then asked how many aces North had all told, and when he showed just one with 5-Diamonds Mr. Malowan knew the opponents held the diamond A.

The 5-No Trumps question about kings brought the response that only one was held so 6-Hearts was safer than the 6-No Trumps that would have been bid if Mr. Beinecke had been able to show two aces.

* * *

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable)

How should South play for 6-Spades against a lead of the Club Q by West, who had made a preemptive 4-Club overcall during the bidding?

RELIEF LOAD DROPS TO NEW LOW IN APRIL

Warm Weather Helps Lower Demands; Costs Down $1,723 From March.

Mansfield and Richland county's relief load dropped to a new low for the year during April.

Tempered by warmer weather which decreased demands for fuel and clothing, Relief Director J. V. Finney's monthly report today showed a total encumbrance of $11,097 for the combined areas.

This is $1,723 less than expenditures for March when the total was hiked to $12,820, highest in the past year.

Major portion of the cost was in Mansfield where $5,069 was spent for food, clothing and shelter for 1,081 persons. In the balance of the county, exclusive of Shelby, a total of $2,519 was spent to provide for 750 individuals.

Total administrative and non-administrative costs were listed at $2,519. This included salaries, medical services, rent for the relief office, purchase of surplus commodities and incidental costs.

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS SNAG TO U. S. INDUSTRY, SPEAKER SAYS

The increasing intrusion of government in business and industry has created uncertainty in business leaders' minds and halted the expansion of industry, J A. Voss, director of industrial relations of the Republic Steel corporation, Cleveland, said last night in a talk before the Mansfield-Shelby Foremen's club at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

"Business doesn't know what the government is going to do next, so it necessarily is in a period of waiting," Voss said. "The government has boards and commissions that regulate wages and hours, unemployment benefits, control crops, flood prevention measures, and soil erosion programs. Some of the boards do good work, but the tendency is to foster themselves on the public."

The National Labor Relations board has failed to accomplish its purpose, but instead has created more controversy and greater animosity between labor and employers, he declared.

"The result of the labor board's operation has been two investigations by senate and house committees. It is hoped that out of this will come a modification of the Wagner act which will result in the realization of some of the ideals which most people had in mind when this act was written. The almost unanimous demand for a revision of the act would lead one to believe that in a democratic form of government, such a revision would certainly be made," he added.

Voss criticized the closed shop and "check-off" as "damaging to business," pointing out that under a closed shop "every employe must belong to a union whether he wants to or not, and there are millions of workmen who don't want to join a national union as shown by the fact that organized labor has never included among its dues-paying members more than a small percentage of those eligible to join."

The club elected E. C. Geiger of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company as president to succeed Jay S. Cairns of the Ohio Fuel Gas company.

Other officers are P. M. Wooden, Mansfield Tire and Rubber company, vice president and program director; D L. Divelbiss, Tappan Stove company, secretary, G. E Mensch, Standard Oil company, treasurer.

New members of the board of control are W. R Mabee, Tappan Stove company, Otis Hart, Shelby Salesbook company. Harry Earl, Shelby Cycle company, and H. Clayton Mayer, Ohio Seamless Tube company, Shelby.

Observing "National Association night," the club members heard brief talks by four officers of the National Association of Foremen, including A. C. Horricks, Akron, president; C. S Coler, Pittsburgh, vice president, H. G. Evans, Akron, secretary, and Frank J Shaffer, Youngstown, a director.
